Bakalis, Thompson to battle for state

Dems split over slate on ticket's bottom spots

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Struggling to be the party of openness, Democrats found harmony for the top of their 1978 ticket Tuesday, but struck different chords as they split sharply on three other choices and then adjourned without a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Working for the first time without the kingmaking power of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, the Democratic State Central Committee unanimously selected Cook County Zoning Board Chairman Alex Seith of Hinsdale for the U.S. Senate; Comptroller Michael Bakalis for governor and incumbent Sec. of State Alan J. Dixon for reelection. Bu the harmony ended there.

Rejecting other suggestions, the Chicago Democratic bloc split with suburban and downstate committeemen to put two Metropolitan Sanitary District commissioners, Jerome Cosentino and Richard Troy, on the ticket as candidates for state treasurer and attorney general and

GOV. JAMES R. THOMPSON

Republicans warned 'every contest risky'

by KURT BAER

Gov. James R. Thompson issued a stern warning to Republican leaders Tuesday night that they cannot sit back and count on powerful front runners to sweep GOP candidates into office next year.

It is "flattering, but fatally dangerous," Thompson said, to believe the political columnists who say Thompson, U.S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and Atty. Gen. William J. Scott are all but unbeatable in 1978.

"We will be making one of the most foolish political mistakes ever made if we assume that the incumbents at the top of the ballot will automatically bring in the rest of the ticket," Thompson told a meeting of the Illinois Republican State Committee and top GOP candidates at the Conrad Hilton in Chicago.

THOMPSON SAID that even in 1976 when he was voted into office by a plurality of 1,390,000 votes, the people of Illinois elected Alan J. Dixon, a Democrat, secretary of state by an almost equally large margin of 1.3 mil-

Supreme Court asked to uphold Viator ruling

by BILL HILL

The U.S. Supreme Court has been asked to uphold for a second time Arlington Heights' refusal to rezone 15 acres near St. Viator High School for the Lincoln Green low-income housing project.

A petition asking the high court to rehear the 6-year-old case between Arlington Heights and the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp. was filed Monday by Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel.

The petition asks that the Supreme Court overturn a ruling in July by the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals that the village's action violated the Fair Housing Act of 1968.

Siegel's brief says the high court should hear the case again "because the decision of the Court of Appeals is clearly in conflict with the original (Supreme Court) decision in this case."

AFTER HEARING oral arguments in the Arlington Heights — MHDC case in October 1976, the Supreme Court ruled in January 1977 that the village's refusal to rezone land for 190 federally subsidized townhouses was not racially discriminatory. The high court, however, ordered the court of appeals to take a second look at the case and decide whether the village's action violated fair housing laws.

The lower court's ruling in July that

"EVERY CASE, of course, is decided on its own merits, but generally if the court has gone to the heart of an issue, that settles it," McGurn said. "Rather frequently the court is asked to rehear a case on which it has acted and generally it does not grant such requests unless the situation of the case has changed," he said.

The Supreme Court each year is asked to rule on about 5,000 cases but issues decisions on less than 400. A general rule followed by the court is that at least four of the nine justices must vote to hear a case for it to be scheduled for review.

Siegel's 33-page brief asking the Supreme Court to hear the Lincoln Green case insists the court of appeals' ruling has "great national consequence which demands the scrutiny of this court."

"THE COURT OF appeals' opinion holds that zoning principles must give way to racial consideration, notwithstanding the fact that the zoning itself was proper by all conventional zoning standards and there was no discriminatory intent in its enactment," Siegel argues.

"The net effect," Siegel's brief states, "is that every municipality in the country must not only zone land for low-income housing, but must rezone otherwise unavailable land if it

Protest of shah disrupts meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bleary-eyed in wafting tear gas, President Carter greeted the shah of Iran on the White House lawn Tuesday as hordes of screaming, club swinging anti-shah demonstrators brawled with police and pro-shah crowds a few hundred yards away.

The shah, his queen and Rosalynn Carter wept and gagged in the wind-carried gas police fired during the half-hour, skull-cracking battle that erupted just as the Iranian monarch arrived for a two-day visit.

White House veterans said they could not recall any comparable disruption of a White House state ceremony, not even during the Vietnam protest era.

U.S. PARK Police said Tuesday evening they counted 92 civilians and 17 police among the injured, most with cuts and bruises. Hospital spokesmen gave a somewhat lower figure but said it included one man, a shah partisan, in serious condition with a skull fracture.

"This probably is the worst demonstration in terms of violence and injuries this city has seen since (the Vietnam war protest on) Mayday of 1971," Park Police spokesman George Berklacy said.

Police first said 20 persons were arrested, but later changed the figure to 11. They said nine were charged with disorderly conduct and two with assaulting police.

An estimated 7,500 to 8,000 pro- and anti-shah demonstrators had gathered on both sides of the White House overnight for rallies.

The demonstrations remained peaceful, if noisy, until the visiting monarch and Empress Farah arrived by limousine at 10:30 a.m. But then the anti-shah pro-

Parkwood faces uphill battle

by THOMAS LEE

In the beginning Gerald Feldman went from coffee klatch to coffee klatch, preaching the gospel of Parkwood according to Feldman.

To all who listened, Feldman declared: one day the City of Parkwood will rise from the confusion that is unincorporated Maine Township. A new suburb will take its place in Chicagoland — a new city with a mayor, aldermen, city hall, post office and even its own zip code.

Some of those who listened remained skeptical. They feared higher taxes. But one by one they came to think like Feldman. They spread the word among neighbors and awaited the passing of petitions, which would call for a spring 1978 referendum to form the City of Parkwood.

SUCH ARE THE humble beginnings of what may become the newest Northwest suburb. Now the home of more than 22,000 persons, the area is immediately east of Des Plaines. It is bounded by the Tri-State Tollway on the west, Milwaukee Avenue on the northeast and Dempster Street on tht south.

If developments proceed according to plan, the printer soon will deliver petitions. They will be passed door-to-door. And if enough people sign — fewer than 300 signatures are needed — residents of the three square mile area will go to the polls in April.

A yes vote would create the city, which Feldman maintains would enable stricter zoning requirements to be adopted, streets to be improved, garbage bins to be moved from public view and police protection to be bolstered. Feldman insists taxes would rise only moderately — about $33 a year on a house of $50,000 fair-market value.

A no vote would leave the area unincorporated. Neighboring communities of Des Plaines, Niles, Park Ridge and Glenview do not want to annex the area, Feldman says.

A no vote also would make Feldman move from the duplex in which he and his family have lived for 13 years, he says. The prime mover of the incorporation drive, Feldman, 42, says he wants to continue living at 8916 W. Emerson St., but without incorporation to solve many of the problems, he won't tolerate further deterioration.

IF THE REFERENDUM were held this week, Feldman fears it would lose badly, perhaps by a 10-to-1 margin. Most people remain unaware of the drive and if told about it briefly probably would oppose it for fear of a big tax hike.

Feldman is out to reverse that situation, but the task may be overwhelming. Between 10,000 and 15,000

Child a commoner

Princess Anne gives birth to son

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne gave birth Tuesday to a 7-pound, 9-ounce son who is fifth in line to the throne. The first known grandchild of a reigning British sovereign ever born a commoner, he will be know simply as "Mr. Phillips."

Artillery resounded across the River Thames 41 times from the ancient Tower of London in celebration of the child, born in the silver jubilee year of Queen Elizabeth's reign.

The 27-year-old Princess gave birth at 10:46 a.m., seven hours after she entered the Austere National Health Service St. Mary's Hospital in London's working class district of Paddington.

DOCTORS SAID Princess Anne and her son were resting comfortably following the birth, which they said Anne's husband, 29-year-oid Capt. Mark Phillips, attended.

Queen Elizabeth was 10 minutes late arriving at a ceremony at Buckingham Palace. She told her cheering audience that Phillips had just telephoned her from the hospital with the news.

The boy, born the day after his parent's fourth wedding anniversary, will displace Princess Margaret as fifth in line to the throne. He follows Princes Charles, Andrew, Edward and his mother in the line of succession.

When Anne's brothers have children, they will push her son down in rank.

Friends of Anne and Mark, himself a commoner, said the fact that their children were unlikely to inherit the throne contributed to their decision not to take a courtesy title for the baby. He will grow up simply as "Mr. Phillips."

RECORDS LIST Princess Ciceley, daughter of Edward IV, as the only other sovereign's daughter to marry a commoner and take no title for herself or her husband. But it is not known whether Ciceley and Thomas Kyme, who wed in 1504, also had children.

The princess went to the hospital for the birth because of a history of gynecological problems although Dr. George Pinker said it was "a normal healthy birth."

Anne's guarded hospital room is an off-white 12-foot-by-12-foot box costing $99 a night. It is furnished with chairs, a black-and-white television and a writing desk.

Although the rejoicing predominated in Great Britain, Scottish Labor MP Willie Hamilton, a well-known critic of the royal family, commented, "How charming — another on the payroll."

Child a commoner

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne gave birth Tuesday to a 7-pound, 9-ounce son who is fifth in line to the throne. The first known grandchild of a reigning British sovereign ever born a commoner, he will be know simply as "Mr. Phillips."

Artillery resounded across the River Thames 41 times from the ancient Tower of London in celebration of the child, born in the silver jubilee year of Queen Elizabeth's reign.

The 27-year-old Princess gave birth at 10:46 a.m., seven hours after she entered the Austere National Health Service St. Mary's Hospital in London's working class district of Paddington.

DOCTORS SAID Princess Anne and her son were resting comfortably following the birth, which they said Anne's husband, 29-year-old Capt. Mark Phillips, attended.

Queen Elizabeth was 10 minutes late arriving at a ceremony at Buckingham Palace. She told her cheering audience that Phillips had just telephoned her from the hospital with the news.

The boy, born the day after his parent's fourth wedding anniversary, will displace Princess Margaret as fifth in line to the throne. He follows Princes Charles, Andrew, Edward and his mother in the line of succession.

When Anne's brothers have children, they will push her son down in rank.

Friends of Anne and Mark, himself a commoner, said the fact that their children were unlikely to inherit the throne contributed to their decision not to take a courtesy title for the baby. He will grow up simply as "Mr. Phillips."

RECORDS LIST Princess Ciceley, daughter of Edward IV, as the only other sovereign's daughter to marry a commoner and take no title for herself or her husband. But it is not known whether Ciceley and Thomas Kyme, who wed in 1504, also had children.

The princess went to the hospital for the birth because of a history of gynecological problems although Dr. George Pinker said it was "a normal healthy birth."

Anne's guarded hospital room is an off-white 12-foot-by-12-foot box costing $99 a night. It is furnished with chairs, a black-and-white television and a writing desk.

Although the rejoicing predominated in Great Britain, Scottish Labor MP Willie Hamilton, a well-known critic of the royal family, commented, "How charming — another on the payroll."

Raid nabs man wanted in heist

by TOM VALEO

Police raided a Wheeling apartment Tuesday and apprehended a 22-year-old village man charged with attempted murder in connection with a $23,000 jewelry store robbery in Knoxville, Tenn., July 26.

Eleven Wheeling policemen raided an apartment at 850 Mark Ln., and arrested Richard Mascarella and a 20-year-old female companion.

Mascarella is charged in a Knoxville warrant with attempted murder of a police officer who chased Mascarella and another unidentified man after the robbery. Mascarella also was charged Tuesday with one felony count of possession of marijuana as well as two misdemeanor counts of possession of needles and syringes and failure to have state firearm identification for a .22 caliber rifle found in the apartment.

JEAN REED, 20, of 720 Old Rand Rd., Lake Zurich, in the apartment at the time of the raid, was charged with possession of a controlled substance, which police said was an amphetamine.

Judge Joseph Schwaba of the Cook County Circuit Court set bond at $20,000 for Mascarella and released Ms. Reed on a $1,000 personal recognizance bond.

Three men also in the apartment at the time of the raid and two Des Plaines men, who came to visit while the raid was in progress, were released.

Mascarella and an unidentified man allegedly robbed Gourdin's Jewelry Store in Knoxville. They escaped with more than $16,000 worth of diamonds, $4,000 worth of watches, eight trays of assorted jewelry and about $300 cash in a car reported stolen from Des Plaines. The second man still is being sought.

THE PAIR LED a Knoxville police officer on a high speed chase and fired one shot at him. The pair escaped after the officer lost control of his car and went off the road.

The next day, Knoxville police, acting on a tip, raided an apartment where they recovered almost all of the stolen merchandise, valued at $23,375, and the getaway car, a 1968 Ford Thunderbird. The occupants of the apartment were not there and never returned.

Police found rolls of film in the car, had them developed and showed the pictures to the officer who had chased the car. The officer identified Mascarella as the driver, police said.

KNOXVILLE POLICE issued a nationwide alert for Mascarella Tuesday morning, saying he was believed to be armed and dangerous. A separate message was sent to Wheeling police saying Mascarella's last known address was 850 Mark Ln., Wheeling.

After staking the apartment for several hours, Lt. Thomas Conte and Patrolmen Burt Kaminsky, Jack Koenig, Tad Leach, Tim Hillyer and Frank Murphy, armed with guns and tear gas, went to the apartment at about 2:30 p.m. and demanded entry.

"We'll fight you to the death," someone in the apartment said, but they surrendered without a struggle, police said.

Five other police officers were outside the apartment assisting in the raid.

Foy case gets 42 less counts; misspelling cited

A Cook County Circuit Court judge Tuesday dropped 42 counts of illegal delivery of a controlled substance against an Arlington Heights doctor because of an apparent misspelling of a drug name.

Dr. Hayward W. Foy still faces 32 counts against him stemming from illegal drug sales allegedly made last year to undercover agents from the now-defunct Illinois Bureau of Investigation.

Saying that he "would not second guess the intent of the state legislature," Judge Robert J. Collins dropped the charges against Dr. Foy, who was indicted by a Cook County grand jury in May 1976.

Each of the 42 dropped counts alleged the doctor, 77, illegally dispensed the drug "phendimetrazine" to patients including young people.

But the 1975 Illinois Revised State Statutes under which Foy was charged spelled the drug "pheudimetrazine," a point which defense attorneys for Foy said warranted the charges be dropped, because "phendimetrazine" was not on the list of controlled substances.

Cook County Assistant States Atty. John Scotillo argued Monday and Tuesday that the drug's name was only misspelled, and the state law meant to include the drug "phendimetrazine" on its list of controlled substances.

Scotillo presented written testimony from chemists that said there is no such drug as "pheudimetrazine" nor does any group of drugs exist with the prefix "pheu."

"This is merely a misspelled word. The legislature would not try to control a non-existing substance," Scotillo told the judge. "The statute should not be so strictly interpreted as to cause a ridiculous result (in court)."

Scotillo said the drug is properly spelled in a 1974 and 1977 order from the Illinois Dept. of Law Enforcement and the revised Illinois statutes for 1977.

Dems split over slate for ticket picked former state official Ronald Burris for comptroller.

BAKALIS WON the committee's approval to pick his own candidate for lieutenant governor.

The open candidate selection was puncutated only once during three days of meetings when the central committee went behind closed doors for 90 minutes and discovered they had no consensus on the candidates for the bottom of the ticket.

The final slate saw the rejection of two candidates who were put on a ticket recommended Monday by State Party Chairman John Touhy and Cook County Democratic Chairman George Dunne, Bakalis and Dixon.

Left out were Chicago attorney Patrick Murphy, rejected for a second time as a candidate for attorney general, and Lake County Clerk Grace Mary Stern, Highland Park, who had sought slating for lieutenant governor and was "recommended" as the candidate for state treasurer.

TIDES TURNED against Murphy when Troy's father-in-law, County Comr. Mathew Bieszozat, a powerful figure in Chicago party circles, reportedly demanded slating for Troy and promised problems for the party in the county assessor's race next year if ignored.

Stern fell victim to Cosentino's backing from organized labor and solid support from Chicago committeemen.

The failure to pick a candidate for lieutenant governor was termed an "embarrassment" by State Rep. John Matijevich, D-Waukegan, who represents the 13th Congressional District on the party council.

But Bakalis rejected that charge, saying he did not want to be forced into a "rash decision" over the selection of a running mate. He offered no hints on whom he might pick.

SEVERAL INFORMED sources suggested Bakalis might select Murphy or State Rep. Richard Luft, D-Pekin, who lost the slating for comptroller to run with him.

Murphy declined to rule out the suggestion, but Luft repeatedly stated he had waged a five month campaign for comptroller and is now content to seek reelection to the Illinois House.

Despite some support from Chicago Democrats, Luft lost to Burris, the former executive director of Operation PUSH. Burris, who served as the director of Dept. of Administrative Services under former Gov. Daniel Walker, was handed a crushing defeat when he ran for comptroller with Walker in the 1976 primary, carrying only three of the state's 102 counties.

The area's two members of the state central committee, State Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland Park, from the 12th District and New Trier Township Democratic Committeeman Lynn Williams of the 10th District split on the selection for attorney general; Pierce backing Troy and Williams supporting Murphy; but voted together in the victory for Burris and defeat for Sterns.

"Every contest poses a risk," the governor said. "No one can tell us precisely what the issues will be in 1978."

Republicans were told to zero in on capturing control of the Illinois Senate and House next year. The five seats the GOP needs to become the Senate majority are "imminently reasonable," and even a GOP majority in the House is "within our reach," Thompson said.

"I don't want to have to govern by veto," the governor said of the need for a Republican legislative majority. "I don't want to have to go with my hat in my hand always trying to arrange (legislative) compromises."

PERCY IDENTIFIED six state Senate seats in suburban Thornton, and Bloom townships, Northwest Chicago, Waukegan, Rockford, Kankakee and far Southern Illinois, as GOP targets.

"My goal and ambition is to see that we deliver at the state level, to see that thre is a Republican legislature working with the Republican governor," Percy said. "We have to show the voters that they can't elect a governor with a 1.4-million vote plurality and then expect him to work with (Senate and House) committee chairmen, who are all Democrats."

U.S. Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-5th, fingered U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, as a congressman "whose lease on political life is long overdue to expire."

In 1976, Mikva was elected over Republican Sam Young by a mere 200 votes in a district where campaigns traditionally have been hard fought.

Derwinski said communication between the Democratic Congress and President Carter is "almost nonexistent," so that the election of Republican congressmen will put the GOP in the position of being able to influence important votes.

ATTY. GEN. SCOTT previewed his election campaign by trumpeting the recently settled Lake Michigan pollution case in which the city of Milwaukee this week agreed to spend $600 to $800 million on new sewage treatment facilities.

"We have been able to save Lake Michigan for future generations," said Scott, who pursued the case through the courts for seven years.

Republicans went out of their way not to call Tuesday's meeting a slate-making session, and they criticized recent unannounced meetings at which a handful of Democratic leaders produced a recommended slate for that party.

The meeting was followed by a fund-raising dinner for Republican House members, where the featured speaker was scheduled to be California Sen. S. I. Hayakawa.

United flight attendants threaten strike Saturday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiators for some 3,000 flight attendants reported no progress Tuesday in negotiations with United Airlines, raising prospects the airline could be shut down by a strike during the Thanksgiving holiday.

Patricia Robertson, president of the Assn. of Flight Attendants, threatened a strike at 12:01 a.m. Saturday unless a new contract agreement is reached.

A strike likely would idle the airline through Thanksgiving Day.

The two sides met Tuesday for the first time since the government imposed a 30-day cooling off period Oct. 19. That period expires Friday and the flight attendants then will be free to strike.

Ms. Robertson said no progrsss was made in negotiations Tuesday. She said the company failed to answer issues that prompted the flight attendants to reject a tentative agreement Sept. 29.

Union officials indicated the flight attendants were seeking improvements in working conditions. Job security also was a big issue in the talks. The union fears airline deregulation would cause layoffs.

Protest disrupts Carter's meeting the shah

testers broke through police lines and the police responded with tear gas.

THE GAS AND the noise drifted into the White House South lawn, where the president was just starting into his welcome speech. The shah recoiled as the fumes reached him, putting his hands to his face.

Through it all, Carter tried valiantly to conduct the ceremony as though nothing unusual were happening.

Standing erect, blinking back tears from the stinging fumes, he called the shah's visit "a great honor" and "a reminder of the strong ties of friendship between your country and ours."

Ironically, his prepared speech contained a line noting there are about 30,000 Iranian exchange students in the United States and saying, "this is a wonderful opportunity for us to share experiences and to plan together for the future."

In his responding speech, the shah said, "we attach utmost importance to our relations with the United States . . . America has always shown a very unselfish and many times very friendly attitude towards us."

With the din of the nearby fighting nearly drowning out his words, with much of his audience choking and weeping in the gas, the shah told Carter: "Thank you very much for your words of welcome."

INSIDE THE executive mansion, Carter told his guests, with a smile, "I have already apologized to the shah for the temporary air pollution."

The shah was expected to focus primarily on oil and arms sale issues, with Carter trying to persuade oil-exporting Iran against further price hikes by petroleum exporters, and the shah seeking more ultramodern U.S. weaponry for his already well equipped armies.

Carter later released a statement saying he had assured the shah, in their first private discussion, that the United States will continue to help Iran meet its military "security needs" and fulfill its "economic and social development programs."

The anti-shah factions — many of them Iranian exchange students wearing colored masks — bore placards and chanted slogans accusing the shah of running a brutally repressive regime in which secret police "torture" and "murder" dissidents.

A strike likely would idle the airline through Thanksgiving Day.

The two sides met Tuesday for the first time since the government imposed a 30-day cooling off period Oct. 19. That period expires Friday and the flight attendants then will be free to strike.

Ms. Robertson said no progrsss was made in negotiations Tuesday. She said the company failed to answer issues that prompted the flight attendants to reject a tentative agreement Sept. 29.

Union officials indicated the flight attendants were seeking improvements in working conditions. Job security also was a big issue in the talks. The union fears airline deregulation would cause layoffs.

testers broke through police lines and the police responded with tear gas.

THE GAS AND the noise drifted into the White House South lawn, where the president was just starting into his welcome speech. The shah recoiled as the fumes reached him, putting his hands to his face.

Through it all, Carter tried valiantly to conduct the ceremony as though nothing unusual were happening.

Standing erect, blinking back tears from the stinging fumes, he called the shah's visit "a great honor" and "a reminder of the strong ties of friendship between your country and ours."

Ironically, his prepared speech contained a line noting there are about 30,000 Iranian exchange students in the United States and saying, "this is a wonderful opportunity for us to share experiences and to plan together for the future."

In his responding speech, the shah said, "we attach utmost importance to our relations with the United States . . . America has always shown a very unselfish and many times very friendly attitude towards us."

With the din of the nearby fighting nearly drowning out his words, with much of his audience choking and weeping in the gas, the shah told Carter: "Thank you very much for your words of welcome."

INSIDE THE executive mansion, Carter told his guests, with a smile, "I have already apologized to the shah for the temporary air pollution."

The shah was expected to focus primarily on oil and arms sale issues, with Carter trying to persuade oil-exporting Iran against further price hikes by petroleum exporters, and the shah seeking more ultramodern U.S. weaponry for his already well equipped armies.

Carter later released a statement saying he had assured the shah, in their first private discussion, that the United States will continue to help Iran meet its military "security needs" and fulfill its "economic and social development programs."

The anti-shah factions — many of them Iranian exchange students wearing colored masks — bore placards and chanted slogans accusing the shah of running a brutally repressive regime in which secret police "torture" and "murder" dissidents.

Driver training for teens hikes death toll: study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — High school driver education for teen-agers is increasing the highway death toll, an insurance industry study said Tuesday.

"At least 2,000 fatal crashes per year that would not otherwise occur are attributed to increased licensure of 16 and 17-year-olds because of driver education," said Dr. Leon Robertson, co-author of the study by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

The net effect of driver education is much higher involvement of teen-agers in highway fatalities, the study said.

THE 27-STATE study found that 80 per cent of the 16 and 17-year-olds who took driver education got licenses they wouldn't have been able to get until they were 18 or 19.

On the other hand, 70 per cent of the teen-agers who had driver education would have gotten licenses when they were 18 or 19 without having had driver education.

"If the age of licensure were raised to age 18, the adverse effects of driver education would be removed," the study said.

"If driver education is continued without raising the age of licensure to age 18, andy possible benefits obtained from having younger teen-agers learn to drive will continue to be gained at a large cost in human life."

The institute said its conclusions are similar to those found in a recent study in England.

PROPOSALS TO increase motorcyclist training in high schools "would likely worsen the present situation substantially," the institute said. Motorcycles and mopeds have higher death rates per vehicle than automobiles.

Studies in California and North Carolina found that students trained on driving courses and by commercial schools had crash rates similar to those of student who learned to drive in high school driver education courses, the researchers said.

"It is obvious that no one should operate a motor vehicle on public roads without first learning to drive," they said.

"The lack of effect of presently used driver education programs should not deter the search for means of improving the skills, knowledge and attitudes of drivers."

Employes at plant overcome by fumes

Dozens of employes at a smoke alarm manufacturing firm in Aurora were overcome by mysterious fumes Tuesday, marking the second time in four days that mysterious, toxic fumes have overcome workers at the plant. Thirty-four employes of Bax Electronics, on the east side of the city, were taken to Mercy Medical Center and Copley Memorial Hospital for treatment. Five persons were admitted to Mercy, a hospital spokesman said, four of them in satisfactory condition and one in fair condition. All other patients were treated and released.

Some 400 employes who work in the production area of the plant were evacuated and the plant was ordered closed until at least Thursday, when results of tests done on air samples and patients' blood samples will be known, plant spokesman Dennis Clair said. Employes also were evacuated Friday when two women collapsed from the fumes. Fifty persons were treated at local hospitals and seven persons were admitted in that incident. One of the workers overcome last week remained hospitalized Tuesday in good condition.

Burnt child's mother to go to court

A 22-year-old Arlington Heights woman will appear Tuesday in Cook County Juvenile Court on charges of aggravated battery for allegedly dunking her 2-year-old daughter into a hot bath Sept. 10. Melissa Green, the daughter of Alta Green, 1519 N. Windsor Dr., remains in serious condition in Cook County Hospital's burn unit, where she has been treated for first-, second-and third-degree burns over 60 per cent of her body. The judge is expected to decide whether Mrs. Green will again be allowed custody of her child.

Suspect Molter freed on bond

Ronald G. Molter, accused of murdering an 18-year-old Mount Prospect coed, was freed on bond Tuesday from a Midland County (Mich.) jail. Molter, 20, of Monroe, was released after he posted 10 per cent of his $30,000 bond. A Midland County judge set the bond Monday after declaring a mistrial in the case after a jury of eight men and four women failed to reach a decision. Molter is charged with murdering Marilyn Goodman, who was found last May near the campus of Northwood Institute, where she was a freshman majoring in secretarial services.

Miss Goodman, daughter of Mount Prospect Village Clerk Donald Goodman, was last seen May 8 at an off-campus party she had attended with Molter. Her partially clad body was found along a path near the institute two days later. A new trial is expected to be set sometime next spring, said Harold S. Fried, a Detroit attorney who defended Molter.

No cab fare warning: Bilandic

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic Tuesday denied that Chicago Consumer Sales Comr. Jane M. Byrne warned him last June that an 11.8 per cent fare hike sought by cab companies was inappropriate and based on false information. The fare hike was approved by the City Council last July. "I got no such warning," Bilandic told reporters at City Hall. "If she had information she would have brought it up, she's a fine competent woman." But Mrs. Byrne reiterated she had warned Bilandic during a June 16 meeting at his office that the fare hike was inappropriate and based on misleading figures.

Suspect, 16, may get adult trial

The Cook County state's attorney's office Tuesday filed a motion seeking to have Randall Kraman, 16, tried as an adult for the slaying of Andrea Sax, 16. Kraman was named in a delinquency petition charging him with murder for the slaying. He has pleaded innocent to the charge. Miss Sax's body was found behind an elementary school in suburban Skokie last week. Authorities said she left her family's home the evening of Nov. and never returned. turned.

Petition filed against Ill. Bell

A Legal Assistance Foundation lawyer charged Tuesday Illinois Bell Telephone Co. has been deceiving customers by failing to tell them about discount service packages Bell offers. Jerrold Oppenheim petitioned the Illinois Commerce Commission for an order requiring Bell to provide more facts to customers. The petition also asks that Bell not be allowed to end two-party phone services. During 57 telephone calls to Bell, the petition said, Bell never volunteered information about two-party service. Statements by Bell about the cheapest available service included 87 factual misrepresentations, the petition said. A Bell spokesman denied its representatives were trained to omit any information. However, he said, Bell does want to stop offering two-party service, except to existing customers.

Dist. 21 wrapup

Board to contribute toward bus padding

Wheeling Township Dist. 21 has agreed to pay for new safety equipment on school buses it rents from Ritzenthaler Bus Lines. The Dist. 21 Board of Education has decided to contribute at least $2,500 to an interdistrict effort to purchase foam padding for the backs of metal seats on the buses. The move to install the protective devices was started in September by Arlington Heights Dist. 25, which asked Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23 and High School Dist. 214 to share the $13,700 cost of the seat padding.

The four districts use buses supplied by Ritzenthaler, which offered to pay for the installation of the padding if the districts would buy the materials. Last month the Dist. 21 board delayed a decision on the expenditure until Dist. 214 responds because the high school district would bear the largest portion of the cost for the equipment. The Dist. 21 board last week decided to approve the expense regardless of Dist. 214's action.

Under the arrangement originally proposed by Dist. 25 the cost of the materials would be prorated between the four districts. Dist. 21 would pay $2,500; Dist. 23, $1,200; Dist. 25, $2,200; and Dist. 214, $7,800. The Dist. 23 board, however, has indicated it does not plan to participate in the program. This will increase the cost to the other districts which choose to pay for the padding, Dist. 21 Board Pres. Elaine Bond said Friday.

The foam padding is supposed to protect students' heads from injury if a collision occurs and their faces are slammed into the backs on all school buses manufactured after September 1974, but about one-third of Ritzenthaler's buses were purchased before that date and they do not have to comply with the law.

Special program grant received

Dist. 21 has received $28,500 in federal funds to establish a junior high school program for children with behavioral disorders.

The money is part of a $400,000 grant awarded by the federal government to the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization to upgrade its services for handicapped children. Dist. 21 is one of 10 area school districts belonging to the NSSEO cooperative.

Gerald Kiffel, Dist. 21 assistant superintendent for support services, said the program is needed for students who are not adequately served by learning disabilities teachers, but whose behavior problems are not serious enough for them to attend Gregory School in Mount Prospect. Gregory is operated by NSSEO for children with severe emotional problems.

Dist. 21, 25 face bus seat pad cost

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

If new safety equipment is to be installed on school buses, Arlington Heights Dist. 25 and Wheeling Township Dist. 21 are going to have to foot the $13,700 bill themselves.

Hopes of sharing the cost of the safety equipment with two other school districts were dashed Monday when the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education voted not to help buy foam padding for the backs of metal seats on school buses supplied by Ritzenthaler Bus Lines.

Officials in Dist. 25 and Dist. 21 Tuesday said they will have to reassess the purchase and decide whether to take it on themselves.

"THERE'S STILL a possibility from our standpoint," Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said. "Our board is on record as being supportive of getting the job done."

Gill said the danger of not having the seat backs padded is obvious and that something should have been done long ago.

The padding is supposed to protect students' heads from injury in the event of a collision in which their bodies are slammed into the seats in front of them. Illinois law requires padded seat backs on all school buses manufactured after September 1974. About one-third of Ritzenthaler's buses were purchased before that date and they do not have to comply with the law.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert Monday told his board the absence of seat back padding isn't a danger to high school students, but recommended the district pay its share "on behalf of the elementary school children" who are in potential danger.

The Dist. 214 board, however, voted 4 to 2 not to purchase the foam padding despite Ritzenthaler's offer to install it if the districts buy the materials.

BOARD MEMBERS Eugene Artemenko, Richard Bachhuber, John Gmitro and Board Pres. Jack Costello voted not to share the cost of buying the padding. Board members Arthur Aronson and Donald Hoeck voted to buy the padding. Board member Marilyn Quinn was absent.

Under the arrangement proposed by Dist. 25 in September, the cost of the foam padding was to be prorated with Dist. 214 paying $7,300; Dist. 21, $2,500; Dist. 25, $2,200; and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, $1,200.

While Dist. 23 officials have made no final decision on the issue, they are not likely to share in the safety equipment purchase because they don't believe it's legal to use taxpayers' money to increase the value of private property.

"We went into this thinking it would be a cooperative venture and if it's not going to be one then we're going to have to reevaluate the situation," Dist. 25 Board Pres. Nicholas Raino said. Tuesday. "We can't foot the bill alone."

JIM SMITH, executive vice president for Ritzenthaler, said he would have to study how and where his company's buses are used to determine whether Dist. 25 and Dist. 21 could pay to have just their buses padded.

If it comes to an all or nothing choice, Raino said he is not sure Dist. 25 would triple its share of dollars to pad all the buses in Ritzenthaler's Arlington Heights garage.

"We don't mind paying for things that are going to be used by Dist. 25 students, but when other districts don't see fit to expend the money I don't think we'll do it for them," he said.

Golf, Goebbert plans protested

Objections were voiced Tuesday to preliminary plans to build an office complex, shopping center, restaurant and savings and loan on 21 acres at the intersection of Golf and Goebbert roads in Arlington Heights.

Plans for developing the site north of Golf Road were presented by Oakwood Properties, Inc. and Carl L. Gardner & Associates, Inc., both of Chicago. They were called "too intense" by members of the village's plat and subdivision committee.

Henry Claussenius, president of the Village Green Homeowners Assn. south of Golf Road in the vicinity of Forest View High School, complained that the Oakwood proposal would add to existing traffic. Problems in the area.

"IT SEEMS TO me the whole area is being overextended with shopping centers and restaurants," Claussenius said. "They will only add to the tremendous amount of school traffic and apartment traffic in this area," he said.

The Oakwood project, called Farmview Manor, calls for an undetermined number of one-story office buildings on the eastern half of the site, a restaurant and savings and loan facility along Golf Road, and a retail center with a supermarket along the western border of the site.

The site, which is in unincorporated Cook County, is south of the parcel where Arlington Heights Park District officials plan to build a historical prairie farm. Representatives of the park district Tuesday encouraged the development of a retail center and restaurant to serve visitors to the prairie farm.

Jerry DeGrazio of Oakwood Properties, Inc., said the project will be architecturally compatible with the prairie farm.

Members of the plat and subdivision committee, however, objected to Oakwood's plans to have the restaurant and savings and loan facility along Golf Road and questioned whether the supermarket would be successful.

Cartoonist lives dream on book's pages

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Cartooning has been James Ecklund's ambition since the day he drew his first sketch, at age 4, of Bozo the Clown.

His experience at college, including a portfolio of political cartoons and his own comic strip creation that appeared in the student newspaper, gave him the chance he needed to perfect his talent.

Today, although he still is searching for the opportunity to produce cartoons, the 21-year-old Elk Grove Village man couldn't be happier. Ecklund has just completed illustrating a children's book written by former Minnesota Sen. Eugene McCarthy.

"It's really weird how everything has happened," Ecklund said as he thumbed through some of his old drawings at his home at 60 Kennedy Blvd. "I couldn't believe it when it happened. I still can't. I was really lucky. It's nice."

THE BOOK, "Mr. Raccoon and his Friends," is a collection of tales conjured up by McCarthy for his children when they were young. The characters — raccoons, horses, beavers, squirrels, skunks, frogs — all have human characteristics. And it was by mere coincidence Ecklund was chosen to portray those animals the way the one-time U.S. presidential candidate wanted them.

After calling nearly 100 Chicago area publishers and sitting through 20 interviews, about all he could get was a job drawing three illustrations for a social studies textbook and touching up an educational filmstrip. Then, like magic, Ecklund was in business.

"Jim was roaming around Michigan Avenue, looking for a job," said Anita Miller, president of Academy Press, publisher of the Senator's book. "McCarthy had casually mentioned he had a book and asked us if we knew an artist who could draw woodland creatures, squirrels and badgers. Jim showed us a raccoon. It was realistic. We knew he was perfect for the job."

MRS. MILLER, whose husband Jordan coordinated McCarthy's 1976 presidential campaign in Illinois, said, "The Senator made it quite clear he wanted something realistic. The Senator is pleased," she said. "Everyone just loves the picture . . ."

Ecklund, who worked four months on the 73 black and white illustrations published in the book, met McCarthy only once — just long enough for the Senator to criticize his initial drawings. "He said I made my animals too happy," Ecklund said. "His conception was a more serious one because he said his characters really led hard lives. He wanted me to get rid of a lot of smiles. He wanted more human implements like telephones and clothing. So I toned them down a little."

McCarthy and his daughter Ellen who coordinated publication of the book, apparently were impressed with Ecklund's modifications. "They seem to be delighted after all of that initial hysteria," Mrs. Miller said.

ECKLUND SAID the exposure he is getting from McCarthy as he promotes the book throughout the country compensates for the small salary he received for his work. He was given a $300 advance and will receive 3 per cent of the publisher's profits. "I was more than happy to take next to nothing just to get the job," he said. "I have always liked cartoons and my family has given me a lot of encouragement."

Currently a night operational engineer at the Gould Inc. in Rolling Meadows, Ecklund is preparing to move to Addison where he plans to work on a children's book of his own, complete with illustrations, of course.

His sketches of Mr. Raccoon, et al., he will leave behind for his friends and neighbors to enjoy. Ecklund has given his work to the Elk Grove Village Public Library for a display the library plans to exhibit on the McCarthy book.

cannot actually demonstrate that properly zoned land is available at prices within federal financial limitations."

Siegel's brief also contends that the court of appeals followed an "unorthodox approach" in ruling on the Lincoln Green case, saying the lower court should have based its decision only upon the original trial court record rather than allowing MHDC to make new arguments.

SINCE THE LINCOLN Green case began in 1971, village officials have insisted the case should not be decided on the basis of racial discrimination, but only as a "garden variety" zoning case. No multiple-family development, whether it is for low-income families or not, should be allowed at the Viator site because of the surrounding residential neighborhoods, village officials say.

MHDC will file a petition with the Supreme Court within 30 days detailing why the nonprofit housing corporation believes the village's request for a new hearing should be denied.

In response to previous briefs filed by Siegel in the Lincoln Green case, MHDC attorney Willis Caruso has accused Arlington Heights officials of racial hostility and an insensitivity to low-income housing.

The Supreme Court is not expected to announce whether it will rehear the Lincoln Green case until early next year.

THE VILLAGE'S "assertion that the opinion will require two zoning ordinances — one for the poor and the black, and another for the rest of the community — mirrors racial animus and provides insight into the white suburban syndrome that continues to separate black and poor from the rest of the community," Caruso argued when the village asked for a rehearing before the court of appeals.

Board to contribute toward bus padding

Wheeling Township Dist. 21 has agreed to pay for new safety equipment on school buses it rents from Ritzenthaler Bus Lines. The Dist. 21 Board of Education has decided to contribute at least $2,500 to an interdistrict effort to purchase foam padding for the backs of metal seats on the buses. The move to install the protective devices was started in September by Arlington Heights Dist. 25, which asked Dist. 21, Prospect Heights Dist. 23 and High School Dist. 214 to share the $13,700 cost of the seat padding.

The four districts use buses supplied by Ritzenthaler, which offered to pay for the installation of the padding if the districts would buy the materials. Last month the Dist. 21 board delayed a decision on the expenditure until Dist. 214 responds because the high school district would bear the largest portion of the cost for the equipment. The Dist. 21 board last week decided to approve the expense regardless of Dist. 214's action.

Under the arrangement originally proposed by Dist. 25 the cost of the materials would be prorated between the four districts. Dist. 21 would pay $2,500; Dist. 23, $1,200; Dist. 25, $2,200; and Dist. 214, $7,800. The Dist. 23 board, however, has indicated it does not plan to participate in the program. This will increase the cost to the other districts which choose to pay for the padding, Dist. 21 Board Pres. Elaine Bond said Friday.

The foam padding is supposed to protect students' heads from injury if a collision occurs and their faces are slammed into the backs on all school buses manufactured after September 1974, but about one-third of Ritzenthaler's buses were purchased before that date and they do not have to comply with the law.

Special program grant received

Dist. 21 has received $28,500 in federal funds to establish a junior high school program for children with behavioral disorders.

The money is part of a $400,000 grant awarded by the federal government to the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization to upgrade its services for handicapped children. Dist. 21 is one of 10 area school districts belonging to the NSSEO cooperative.

Gerald Kiffel, Dist. 21 assistant superintendent for support services, said the program is needed for students who are not adequately served by learning disabilities teachers, but whose behavior problems are not serious enough for them to attend Gregory School in Mount Prospect. Gregory is operated by NSSEO for children with severe emotional problems.

Dist. 21, 25 face bus seat pad cost

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

If new safety equipment is to be installed on school buses, Arlington Heights Dist. 25 and Wheeling Township Dist. 21 are going to have to foot the $13,700 bill themselves.

Hopes of sharing the cost of the safety equipment with two other school districts were dashed Monday when the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education voted not to help buy foam padding for the backs of metal seats on school buses supplied by Ritzenthaler Bus Lines.

Officials in Dist. 25 and Dist. 21 Tuesday said they will have to reassess the purchase and decide whether to take it on themselves.

"THERE'S STILL a possibility from our standpoint," Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill said. "Our board is on record as being supportive of getting the job done."

Gill said the danger of not having the seat backs padded is obvious and that something should have been done long ago.

The padding is supposed to protect students' heads from injury in the event of a collision in which their bodies are slammed into the seats in front of them. Illinois law requires padded seat backs on all school buses manufactured after September 1974. About one-third of Ritzenthaler's buses were purchased before that date and they do not have to comply with the law.

Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert Monday told his board the absence of seat back padding isn't a danger to high school students, but recommended the district pay its share "on behalf of the elementary school children" who are in potential danger.

The Dist. 214 board, however, voted 4 to 2 not to purchase the foam padding despite Ritzenthaler's offer to install it if the districts buy the materials.

BOARD MEMBERS Eugene Artemenko, Richard Bachhuber, John Gmitro and Board Pres. Jack Costello voted not to share the cost of buying the padding. Board members Arthur Aronson and Donald Hoeck voted to buy the padding. Board member Marilyn Quinn was absent.

Under the arrangement proposed by Dist. 25 in September, the cost of the foam padding was to be prorated with Dist. 214 paying $7,300; Dist. 21, $2,500; Dist. 25, $2,200; and Prospect Heights Dist. 23, $1,200.

While Dist. 23 officials have made no final decision on the issue, they are not likely to share in the safety equipment purchase because they don't believe it's legal to use taxpayers' money to increase the value of private property.

"We went into this thinking it would be a cooperative venture and if it's not going to be one then we're going to have to reevaluate the situation," Dist. 25 Board Pres. Nicholas Raino said. Tuesday. "We can't foot the bill alone."

JIM SMITH, executive vice president for Ritzenthaler, said he would have to study how and where his company's buses are used to determine whether Dist. 25 and Dist. 21 could pay to have just their buses padded.

If it comes to an all or nothing choice, Raino said he is not sure Dist. 25 would triple its share of dollars to pad all the buses in Ritzenthaler's Arlington Heights garage.

"We don't mind paying for things that are going to be used by Dist. 25 students, but when other districts don't see fit to expend the money I don't think we'll do it for them," he said.

Golf, Goebbert plans protested

Objections were voiced Tuesday to preliminary plans to build an office complex, shopping center, restaurant and savings and loan on 21 acres at the intersection of Golf and Goebbert roads in Arlington Heights.

Plans for developing the site north of Golf Road were presented by Oakwood Properties, Inc. and Carl L. Gardner & Associates, Inc., both of Chicago. They were called "too intense" by members of the village's plat and subdivision committee.

Henry Claussenius, president of the Village Green Homeowners Assn. south of Golf Road in the vicinity of Forest View High School, complained that the Oakwood proposal would add to existing traffic. Problems in the area.

"IT SEEMS TO me the whole area is being overextended with shopping centers and restaurants," Claussenius said. "They will only add to the tremendous amount of school traffic and apartment traffic in this area," he said.

The Oakwood project, called Farmview Manor, calls for an undetermined number of one-story office buildings on the eastern half of the site, a restaurant and savings and loan facility along Golf Road, and a retail center with a supermarket along the western border of the site.

The site, which is in unincorporated Cook County, is south of the parcel where Arlington Heights Park District officials plan to build a historical prairie farm. Representatives of the park district Tuesday encouraged the development of a retail center and restaurant to serve visitors to the prairie farm.

Jerry DeGrazio of Oakwood Properties, Inc., said the project will be architecturally compatible with the prairie farm.

Members of the plat and subdivision committee, however, objected to Oakwood's plans to have the restaurant and savings and loan facility along Golf Road and questioned whether the supermarket would be successful.

Prospector wins editorial awards

The Prospector, Prospect High School's newspaper, recently received a first-class rating from the National Scholastic Press Assn. for the second semester of last year. The newspaper also was given marks of distinction in coverage and content as well as editorial leadership and opinion features.

Cartoonist lives dream on book's pages

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Cartooning has been James Ecklund's ambition since the day he drew his first sketch, at age 4, of Bozo the Clown.

His experience at college, including a portfolio of political cartoons and his own comic strip creation that appeared in the student newspaper, gave him the chance he needed to perfect his talent.

'Juvenile prostitution on increase'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Since 1970, the number of Midwest girls lured into Times Square prostitution has increased tenfold, a Minneapolis police lieutenant said Tuesday.

Lt. Garry McGaughey said seven years ago the Minneapolis-New York prostitution pipeline used to provide 30 to 40 Midwest girls a year. Now 300 to 400 new arrivals are selling their bodies on New York City streets, he said.

McGaughey made his remarks at a hearing of the state Select Committee on Crime where a number of officials agreed that juvenile prostitution is a burgeoning problem but differed on how to stem the tide.

ALL IT TAKES, McGaughey said, is a scared, young Midwest kid — perhaps with some family problems, drug involvement and a bit of sexual experience — and a smooth-talking pimp.

"The pimps are well schooled to play the distorted psyches these women have," McGaughey said. "Through her twisted values and twisted psyche she'll accept this man as her father image.

"I've known hundreds of such women and not once did they go unwillingly," said McGaughey, who came to New York last week in an unsuccessful effort to take some of the girls off the streets and back home.

McGaughey said that once in New York, the girls go to work for the pimp who brought them or else are sold to another pimp, usually for about $1,000. Their lives in New York are marked by physical and sexual brutalities at the hands of pimps determined to keep them submissive.

HE SAID SOME 200 pimps are known to be involved in the pipeline but in the last six years in Minneapolis, only 35 cases were brought against pimps because the girls are reluctant to testify against them.

While witnesses at the second day of hearings at the Chamber of Commerce Building in Manhattan agreed that something had to be done about juvenile prostitution, they disagreed as to where the problem lay.

McGaughey complained they were run through the criminal justice system with few attempts made to place them in a "sterile environment where they could be rehabilitated."

Other officials blamed New York police for failing to make arrests, prosecutors for failing to prosecute, difficulties in identifying under-age prostitutes and the lack of adequate facilities where they can find help.

Sadat hopes to end 3 decades of war

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Tuesday told a group of U.S. congressmen in Cairo his visit to Jerusalem is a holy mission to break three decades of a vicious circle of war in the Middle East for the sake of future generations. "I have no conditions and I intend to go to the Israelis' den to tell them the truth," Sadat said of his offer to appear before the Israeli Knesset (parliament) to discuss his views on Middle East peace. A high-ranking Western diplomat said Sadat "is determined to go through with the visit."

A senior Egyptian official rated the chances of the visit actually taking place at 80 per cent.

Israeli Premier Menahem Begin Tuesday extended the invitation through U.S. Ambassador to Israel Samuel W. Lewis. If the visit materializes, Sadat will be the first Arab head of state to go to Israel since its creation in 1948.

Britain's firefighters aid troops

Several of Britain's 35,000 striking firefighters broke into their own firehouse Tuesday to get a ladder which they used to rescue a man trapped in a building 60 feet above ground. Parliament convened in emergency session Tuesday to discuss what to do about the strike in which firefighters want a 30 per cent raise. They now make $118 a week. One group of striking firefighters expressed fear they would be fired for responding to an emergency call to help evacuate a flaming hospital. Three firefighters helped soldiers when fire broke out in a ninth floor apartment in London's Battersea district. They advised the infantrymen and supervised the rescue of three young women and a two-year-old boy.

S. Africa bulldozers to raze homes

South African government bulldozers moved into position Tuesday to evict and raze the ghetto homes of black men listed by the government as single although they may have wives and children. Residents have vowed to fight with "passive resistance." At issue is a 1960s law in which the white supremacist government ruled that the black township of Alexandra, which adjoins Johannesburg's upper class white suburbs, should allow only single blacks to live there and decreed that they be housed in huge dormitories. The law will take its course starting Wednesday with the eviction of the first of 3,000 men and the razing of their homes.

GOP urge Carter: dump energy plan

Republicans urged President Carter Tueday night to dump his energy proposal and offer another plan that will "keep America great" by requiring people to sacrifice less and emphasizing new production instead. In a televised response to the energy speech Carter delivered last week, Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., said the president's energy plan is not worth salvaging.

"I think the president should come before this nation and say that the plan that he gave us last April doesn't work — that we have a newer, tougher, greater plan — and that we're going to have to work 24 hours a day, 7 days a week to solve the energy crisis," Packwood said. He cited a study by the congressional General Accounting Office, which said Carter's program did not even meet the goals he had set for increased coal production, more solar energy and reduced oil imports. "Instead of the plan that you have given us, why not a new plan that will, indeed, keep America great," Packwood said. "In short, Mr. President, why not the best?"

Hearst trial not fair: attorneys

Attorneys for newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst Tuesday asked a federal appeals court for a rehearing on her bank robbery conviction, arguing that she did not get a fair trial. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last month upheld her conviction. If a rehearing is denied, Miss Hearst may go to the U.S. Supreme Court in her efforts to have the conviction reversed. With their petition to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the attorneys attached an effidavit saying that if the trial judge had not ruled that Miss Hearst could plead the 5th Amendment, she would not have taken the stand. Miss Hearst was convicted of robbing a San Francisco bank about six weeks after she was kidnapped in 1974. She is free on $1.2 million bail.

Lance refusals cited by records

Former budget director Bert Lance refused to give details on his use of a bank airplane and certain personal financial operations because they are the subject of federal investigations, Senate records showed Tuesday. The records were published by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee as postscripts to its report on the September inquiry that led to Lance's resignation as President Carter's budget chief.

"Mr. Lance is unable at this time to provide detailed information regarding the assets of the various partnerships which were placed in the blind trust," Lance's attorney Robert Altman said in a letter to the committee. "The necessary financial records have been subpoenaed from the trustee by other government agencies and are not currently available." Lance's attorney also declined to provide further information on Lance's use of a National Bank of Georgia plane in 1975 and 1976.

'Juvenile prostitution on increase'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Since 1970, the number of Midwest girls lured into Times Square prostitution has increased tenfold, a Minneapolis police lieutenant said Tuesday.

Lt. Garry McGaughey said seven years ago the Minneapolis-New York prostitution pipeline used to provide 30 to 40 Midwest girls a year. Now 300 to 400 new arrivals are selling their bodies on New York City streets, he said.

McGaughey made his remarks at a hearing of the state Select Committee on Crime where a number of officials agreed that juvenile prostitution is a burgeoning problem but differed on how to stem the tide.

ALL IT TAKES, McGaughey said, is a scared, young Midwest kid — perhaps with some family problems, drug involvement and a bit of sexual experience — and a smooth-talking pimp.

"The pimps are well schooled to play the distorted psyches these women have," McGaughey said. "Through her twisted values and twisted psyche she'll accept this man as her father image.

"I've known hundreds of such women and not once did they go unwillingly," said McGaughey, who came to New York last week in an unsuccessful effort to take some of the girls off the streets and back home.

McGaughey said that once in New York, the girls go to work for the pimp who brought them or else are sold to another pimp, usually for about $1,000. Their lives in New York are marked by physical and sexual brutalities at the hands of pimps determined to keep them submissive.

HE SAID SOME 200 pimps are known to be involved in the pipeline but in the last six years in Minneapolis, only 35 cases were brought against pimps because the girls are reluctant to testify against them.

While witnesses at the second day of hearings at the Chamber of Commerce Building in Manhattan agreed that something had to be done about juvenile prostitution, they disagreed as to where the problem lay.

McGaughey complained they were run through the criminal justice system with few attempts made to place them in a "sterile environment where they could be rehabilitated."

Other officials blamed New York police for failing to make arrests, prosecutors for failing to prosecute, difficulties in identifying under-age prostitutes and the lack of adequate facilities where they can find help.

Sadat hopes to end 3 decades of war

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Tuesday told a group of U.S. congressmen in Cairo his visit to Jerusalem is a holy mission to break three decades of a vicious circle of war in the Middle East for the sake of future generations. "I have no conditions and I intend to go to the Israelis' den to tell them the truth," Sadat said of his offer to appear before the Israeli Knesset (parliament) to discuss his views on Middle East peace. A high-ranking Western diplomat said Sadat "is determined to go through with the visit."

A senior Egyptian official rated the chances of the visit actually taking place at 80 per cent.

Israeli Premier Menahem Begin Tuesday extended the invitation through U.S. Ambassador to Israel Samuel W. Lewis. If the visit materializes, Sadat will be the first Arab head of state to go to Israel since its creation in 1948.

Britain's firefighters aid troops

Several of Britain's 35,000 striking firefighters broke into their own firehouse Tuesday to get a ladder which they used to rescue a man trapped in a building 60 feet above ground. Parliament convened in emergency session Tuesday to discuss what to do about the strike in which firefighters want a 30 per cent raise. They now make $118 a week. One group of striking firefighters expressed fear they would be fired for responding to an emergency call to help evacuate a flaming hospital. Three firefighters helped soldiers when fire broke out in a ninth floor apartment in London's Battersea district. They advised the infantrymen and supervised the rescue of three young women and a two-year-old boy.

S. Africa bulldozers to raze homes

South African government bulldozers moved into position Tuesday to evict and raze the ghetto homes of black men listed by the government as single although they may have wives and children. Residents have vowed to fight with "passive resistance." At issue is a 1960s law in which the white supremacist government ruled that the black township of Alexandra, which adjoins Johannesburg's upper class white suburbs, should allow only single blacks to live there and decreed that they be housed in huge dormitories. The law will take its course starting Wednesday with the eviction of the first of 3,000 men and the razing of their homes.

GOP urge Carter: dump energy plan

Republicans urged President Carter Tueday night to dump his energy proposal and offer another plan that will "keep America great" by requiring people to sacrifice less and emphasizing new production instead. In a televised response to the energy speech Carter delivered last week, Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., said the president's energy plan is not worth salvaging.

"I think the president should come before this nation and say that the plan that he gave us last April doesn't work — that we have a newer, tougher, greater plan — and that we're going to have to work 24 hours a day, 7 days a week to solve the energy crisis," Packwood said. He cited a study by the congressional General Accounting Office, which said Carter's program did not even meet the goals he had set for increased coal production, more solar energy and reduced oil imports. "Instead of the plan that you have given us, why not a new plan that will, indeed, keep America great," Packwood said. "In short, Mr. President, why not the best?"

Hearst trial not fair: attorneys

Attorneys for newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst Tuesday asked a federal appeals court for a rehearing on her bank robbery conviction, arguing that she did not get a fair trial. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last month upheld her conviction. If a rehearing is denied, Miss Hearst may go to the U.S. Supreme Court in her efforts to have the conviction reversed. With their petition to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the attorneys attached an effidavit saying that if the trial judge had not ruled that Miss Hearst could plead the 5th Amendment, she would not have taken the stand. Miss Hearst was convicted of robbing a San Francisco bank about six weeks after she was kidnapped in 1974. She is free on $1.2 million bail.

Lance refusals cited by records

Former budget director Bert Lance refused to give details on his use of a bank airplane and certain personal financial operations because they are the subject of federal investigations, Senate records showed Tuesday. The records were published by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee as postscripts to its report on the September inquiry that led to Lance's resignation as President Carter's budget chief.

"Mr. Lance is unable at this time to provide detailed information regarding the assets of the various partnerships which were placed in the blind trust," Lance's attorney Robert Altman said in a letter to the committee. "The necessary financial records have been subpoenaed from the trustee by other government agencies and are not currently available." Lance's attorney also declined to provide further information on Lance's use of a National Bank of Georgia plane in 1975 and 1976.

Word is spread, but Parkwood faces uphill fight

GERALD FELDMAN, prime mover of the drive to create the City of Parkwood, explains his arguments to Ina Minsky, center, and Evelyn Einbund.

eligible voters live in the area. For Parkwood to become incorporated, a majority of them must be persuaded.

To bring about this reversal, Feldman is spending his evenings in coffee klatches such as one this week at the home of Estelle Pitt, 9354 Maple Ln. A sparse turnout of eight persons underscored the challenge facing Feldman and the Parkwood Incorporation Committee.

"Do you know how many people said they would come tonight?" Mrs. Pitt asked. "I was expecting 25 people. I called 50. I can't believe none of my neighbors came. All of them said they were coming."

But eight persons are eight signatures and eight votes and elections have been lost by less. So Feldman began his talk, hoping for eight more Parkwood supporters.

THE CITY OF Parkwood would bring back to local voters the power to make local decisions, power now held by Cook County, Feldman says. Power held at the county level is too remote for wise decisions to be made, he says.

"I once saw a map of Cook County, a huge map. And if you took the whole area that we're talking about for Parkwood, it is the size of a period. So it's no wonder that Cook County doesn't pay any attenion to us."

Feldman, who owns a Chicago drapery service business and is president of the Golf-Maine Park District board of commissioners, recalled when his name first became publicly known as a park commissioner.

"I had people call me and say, 'I've got rodents in my apartment building and the landlord won't do anything about it.' These people had no one else to call but me — no one local, anyway. Things are in a pretty sad state when you have to call a park commissioner for things like that."

Gimmick bet scrambling draws mixed reviews

A plan to make life difficult for messenger betting services by scrambling the schedule of "gimmick" betting drew mixed reviews, race track officials and betting service officials said in Chicago Tuesday.

One angry bettor hurled down his program and stomped out of Sportsman's Park racetrack. Another cursed a ticket-seller when told there would not be daily double wagering on the first and second races.

A track spokesman said a number of persons walked out and "more than a few" grumbled when they learned the traditional setup for gimmick betting — such things as the daily double, perfectas, trifectas and quinnellas — was being shifted beginning Monday and that bettors would be given only short notice to place their gimmick bets. But others were pleased by the change.

AND THE STRATEGY, as intended, cut revenues of the messenger services.

Horsemen and track operators long have complained the messenger services boon bets rather than deliver them to the tracks, thereby reducing track revenues, race purses and the state tax on wagering.

The short notice was devised by Billy Johnston Jr., president of the Chicago Downs thoroughbred meeting which opened Monday at Sportsman's, as a way to prevent the services from handling the popular bets.

On Monday, the daily double — traditionally on the first and second races — was switched to the third and fourth. Other gimmicks also were shifted around on short notice. Similar secret switches were ordered Tuesday.

"Business is beyond expectations," Johnston said.

"MANY OF THE regular bettors told me they enjoyed the idea," he said.

But a track spokesman said some gamblers also were upset.

Gimmick bet scrambling draws mixed reviews

A plan to make life difficult for messenger betting services by scrambling the schedule of "gimmick" betting drew mixed reviews, race track officials and betting service officials said in Chicago Tuesday.

One angry bettor hurled down his program and stomped out of Sportsman's Park racetrack. Another cursed a ticket-seller when told there would not be daily double wagering on the first and second races.

A track spokesman said a number of persons walked out and "more than a few" grumbled when they learned the traditional setup for gimmick betting — such things as the daily double, perfectas, trifectas and quinnellas — was being shifted beginning Monday and that bettors would be given only short notice to place their gimmick bets. But others were pleased by the change.

AND THE STRATEGY, as intended, cut revenues of the messenger services.

Horsemen and track operators long have complained the messenger services boon bets rather than deliver them to the tracks, thereby reducing track revenues, race purses and the state tax on wagering.

The short notice was devised by Billy Johnston Jr., president of the Chicago Downs thoroughbred meeting which opened Monday at Sportsman's, as a way to prevent the services from handling the popular bets.

On Monday, the daily double — traditionally on the first and second races — was switched to the third and fourth. Other gimmicks also were shifted around on short notice. Similar secret switches were ordered Tuesday.

"Business is beyond expectations," Johnston said.

"MANY OF THE regular bettors told me they enjoyed the idea," he said.

But a track spokesman said some gamblers also were upset.

Bad news doesn't deter determined protein dieter

John Lampinen

Byline report

For 13 years, Laima Dickens fought a never-ending battle with her waistline.

She never was that much overweight really. Maybe 15 to 25 pounds. But it was enough to make her feel bad about herself.

And for 13 years, she tried diets. All kinds of diets. Water diets, fasting diets, grapefruit diets. But they didn't work for her.

Until liquid protein.

SHE HAS BEEN using it for a little more than three weeks and has shed 15 of the 25 pounds she wanted to lose. She is sold on it. "I'm happy," she says. "I thank the Lord because I feel this is my answer. This IS my answer."

Of course, not everybody is as happy about liquid protein. The Food and Drug Administration says the diet may be dangerous. Last week, FDA Comr. Donald Kennedy said it appears the diet was a factor in at least 10 deaths.

When his comments hit the airwaves and the newspaper headlines, Mrs. Dickens began getting calls from friends and relatives.

"We love you," they told her. "We don't want you to die."

So Mrs. Dickens, 29, of Glenview, also is more than a little apprehensive.

"It scared me very much," she says. "I am scared right now, just until they can do further tests."

IT DIDN'T, however, scare her enough to scrap the diet. She plans to stay on it for two or three more weeks until she loses the remaining 10 pounds.

She is not the only one who maintains confidence in the diet despite the current uproad about its safety.

Bobbie Oleson of Arlington Heights had been on the diet for three months this summer before the controversy began. Under medical supervision and a program that included supplements in folic acid, calcium, multiple vitamins and potassium, she lost 34 pounds.

"I saw results which I've never seen before," Mrs. Oleson says.

She dropped the diet in mid-September, she says, because by then she was only losing a pound per week and she figured it wasn't worth that strict a diet.

But she does have more weight to lose, and Mrs. Oleson says she probably will return to liquid protein to lose it.

"I WOULD BE a little nervous about it," she admits. "But so far, from what I've read, everything (the nutrients) they say has been missing in the diets, I had."

BOBBIE OLESON of Arlington Heights used the controversial liquid protein diet to lose 34 pounds in three months before its safety came under fire.

But the controversy has made dieters like Mrs. Dickens pause.

She had been on the program for two weeks when friends began warning her about it. It got her so nervous, that she slipped off the diet for a couple of days, she says.

Then, Mrs. Dickens talked to a doctor and also went to Donald Zimberg for reassurance.

Zimberg is director of New Life Weight Loss Center in Niles, which is supervising Mrs. Dickens' diet. He also has been concerned about the FDA reports, although for a different reason.

While the FDA has emphasized that its main concern is discouraging persons from going on the diet without medical supervision, Zimberg says his business has suffered from the adverse publicity.

HE TOLD MRS. Dickens that his center has supervised the diet for 4,000 clients, and none has suffered complications.

Zimberg, who says he has lost more than 100 pounds on the regimen, has a lot to say about the FDA statements, not the least of which is that the agency is "looking for publicity, and they're not giving the full report."

But he concedes there are dangers with liquid protein. Basically, he says, unsupervised dieters could suffer from lack of potassium or salt, which in turn could cause serious complications.

That, however, is not a real concern with a supervised program, he says, particularly with a clinic of diet specialists who take daily urine tests and run blood tests at least three times a month.

"THIS REALLY is the best diet that exists," Zimberg says. "It's the healthiest diet, but you have to take your supplements."

Although clients at New Life continue to whisper about the frequent news reports on the subject, Zimberg's words were good enough for Mrs. Dickens.

Those 10 women who died must have died for other reasons, she says. Publicity about the diet is adverse because the stories sell newspapers. The full report hasn't been told, she says.

Lenient penalty in vandal case

The Gerald Schubring family in Prospect Heights are justifiably wondering about the kind of justice available in Cook County.

The Schubrings came home from vacation in July to discover $9,000 in damage to their house — the result of senseless vandalism.

The culprits were six neighborhood boys, age 10 to 14. The boys were found guilty last week in a juvenile court hearing of criminal trespass and vandalism. Judge James Walton placed three of the boys on one-year probation, two under one-year court supervision and one under six months court supervision.

That was all. Neither the boys nor their parents were ordered to make restitution or even to apologize to the Schubrings for the crime. Only one parent of the six children has taken the initiative to call the family to express concern.

The court's action is much too lenient considering the losses suffered by the Schubrings. And while the boys involved had no previous record and certainly should not be treated as hardened criminals, the court should have at least impressed on them that their actions went beyond a "childish prank."

Nothing can replace some of the photographs or keepsakes that were destroyed by the vandals. And, perhaps, no payment for the damages could ever compensate the family for the shock of returning to find the damage.

However, justice was not served in the outcome of the Schubring case. Until such celebrated cases are dealt with more severely, the chances of eliminating vandalism are remote, and the innocent victims of vandalism will go uncompensated.

Soviet A-test idea good

It was appropriate that Leonid Brezhnev called for a worldwide ban on atomic tests as the Soviet Union began celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Despite economic setbacks, the Soviet Union in the past 60 years ahs risen from a backward country with a high illiteracy rate, to an industrialized, better-educated superpower capable of destroying much of the world with the push of a button.

Brezhnev, however, did more to demonstrate his country's power through his conciliatory gesture, than any May Day parade in Moscow could have with its demonstration of military hardware.

The Soviet leader's call for a halt to nuclear tests is an encouraging development towards an end of the nuclear arms race.

Baseball used to be fun in days before big money

Jim Bishop

Just before Casey Stengel retired, the grammarian snorted, "Baseball used to be fun. When I played third, and nobody was on, I used to field a grounder and throw it to second. Let him worry about it."

Baseball stopped being fun some time ago. Ring Lardner called it the ivory trade. Today it's capital gains. The players are rich and contentious. Many of them earn more than their managers. The rebuttal to a bawling out is, "Trade me."

Eddie Stanky invented the four-arm pitch. He stood on second base waving his arms up and down as his pitcher wound up. The batter saw four arms and knew that the pitch couldn't come from three of them.

THE NATIONAL League had to add a law against it. In 1890, the Baltimore Orioles devised the "safety ball." The outfielders planted three balls in the grass near each position. If an enemy batter hit one over an outfielder's head, he picked up the "safety ball" and tossed it to second.

This held the runner on first. I don't go that far back in baseball, but Stan and Shirley Fischler do in their book, "The Best, Worst and Most unusual in Sports." One day a batter hit one to left center. The left fielder picked up a "safety ball" and threw it to second.

The center fielder kept chasing the real ball. He trapped it and tossed it to second. The umpire thought he had double vision. Baltimore lost the game by forfeit.

Nobody could hit foul balls like Luke Appling of the White Sox. Once, when the White Sox played the Yankees at the stadium, the New York management refused to give Appling two free tickets. Luke knew the home team paid for the baseballs. So in batting practice, he fouled a gross into the stands.

THE SOX HAD two on one day when Appling came to bat. Red Ruffing, a good hitting pitcher and a man who had eight toes, blazed two fast strikes past Luke. This irritated Appling so he fouled the next six into the stands. With two out, Red was sweating.

Ruffing threw a wide one that Luke ignored. Eventually, the count was three and two. Red began to toss one strike after another. Appling fouled 14 straight. Furious, Ruffing threw one so wide that the catcher fell on it.

Appling walked. Ruffing was out of his mind when Mike Kreevich came to bat. Kreevich saw one coming down the pipe and whacked it for a double and two runs. Appling stopped at third. Ruffing ran over, saliva dripping from his chin, shrieking, "You did it! You did it with those bleepin' foul balls!"

No team was funnier than the old Dodgers. The standard joke when Uncle Wilbert Robinson ran the team concerned a fan high on the last row of seats and a cab driver below. "Who's at bat?" "Dodgers." "Anybody on:" "Three." "Which base?"

BABE HERMAN was big stick, no field. They say he caught balls in the outfield off his forehead. Brooklyn was playing Pittsburgh and Uncle Wilbert put a rookie in to pitch. The best you could say for the kid was that he had a haircut.

The first batter hit a pitch and it caromed off the corrugated tin in the outfield. Herman fielded it as though he was chasing a drunken butterfly. The second batter hit it off the corrugated tin with the same explosive sound.

Pittsburgh couldn't hit anything except successive doubles. Uncle Wilbert waddled out to the mound and said, "That'll be all today, sonny." The kid balked. "Where the hell were you when I was takin' the shelling? I'm staying." Now this was an unusual situation even for Brooklyn.

Robinson thought about it. Babe Herman laid out on the grass in the outfield and pulled his cap over his eyes. "Kid," the manager said. "If you don't get off the mound, I'm going to call the park cops. You don't wanna see that in the papers, right?"

THE KID THOUGHT it over. Before he walked into the dugout, he turned and threw the ball as hard as he could to the outfield. It was just an expression of outrage. However, it hit the corrugated tin fence and Babe Herman came off the grass flying.

He thought the shelling had started again. He played it off the tin and tossed to second. Uncle Wilbert shook his head sadly. "Best throw he made all season," he murmured.

It was Billy Loes who was asked why he never won 20 games. "Why should I?" said the pitcher. "If you do it one year they want you to do it every year . . ."

Harper board wins their support

I have read with concern about the happenings at Harper College. It seems as if a group of citizens don't like what the board is doing.

When I vote for a school board member, I want that person to act with responsibility and judgment. I want board members to read and study and ask questions and then make up their own minds based on the gathered information.

I think the board members are doing a good job. If they hadn't asked questions, no one would have known about the spending of $4,000 more in merit pay than was supposed to be spent. If they hadn't asked questions, we might be building the second campus before we are sure it really is needed, or whether we have the money.

All of us need to remember that Harper is a good place with the chance for getting a good education. It has many fine people on its staff.

If we want to stay away from a fight that will hurt the college, let's leave the board members alone to do their job. I think all of them care about Harper and will do what they think is right.

I QUESTION THE motives of the self-appointed "Save Harper" committee.

The "invitation only" format of its meeting explicitly excluded all Harper Board members other than long-time Lahti supporter, Harper Trustee Jessalyn Nicklas.

Hoffman Estates Village President Virginia Hayter has stated that "some things have been done at Harper that are totally improper for board members." She declined to cite specific charges, saying "that will come out at the meeting."

If charges of improper conduct were to be made against the Harper Board, why weren't they invited to attend so that they could answer such charges?

The high-handed tactics of the "Save Harper" committee can only be meant to embarrass the Harper Board in retaliation for their dismissal of Robert E. Lahti.

Harper College needs a president who has the respect of the faculty, administrators and staff. Lahti did not have this respect.

The board made the right decision. The community should let them know that they have our confidence and support.

'Substitutes continue education'

In reference to the second of your articles about absenteeism in the schools, I am compelled to comment upon one of your statements. It was said that education deteriorated or was eliminated when a substitute teacher walked in the door. That need not be true!

I had to leave full time teaching when we moved from the community where I was employed, and have been substituting in this area all fall. I have yet to walk into a classroom where the teacher had not left adequate lesson plans and material for teaching. These plans contained either the continuation of work being done, or supplementary and enrichment programs which the teacher would be using at some time during the unit. The point is that a certified teacher can pick up and continue the education of our young people without the great loss of time which your article described.

The problem does not lie in the fact that the teacher is occasionally absent, but in the behavior of the students which reflects their attitudes toward school and teachers. Many of them immediately assume that teacher absence means a "day off" and the name of the game is to see how much they can get away with. Therefore, the substitute does turn into a disciplinarian almost automatically. It is my contention that when parents instill respect for the process of education, and make it clear that they will not tolerate such nonsense when it is reported to them learning can take place on the occasions full time teachers are gone.

ERA must stay within its deadline

In the heat of any great struggle, it is always tempting to say that everything which can be done to enhance the prospects for victory should be done.

It ain't necessarily so, as the current battle over ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment rather painfully illustrates.

For those who support the ERA, and we number ourselves among them, it is virtually unthinkable that this last great American civil rights crusade should fail.

"EQUALITY OF rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

There it is, in its entirety — the sentence which has precipitated one of the most baffling and bitter political conflicts of this century.

Congress approved the ERA in 1972 and 35 states have by act of their legislatures ratified it in the years since. But three more are needed by March 1979 if the amendment is to become part of the Constitution.

And ERA has fallen upon hard times. It has become the prime target of millions of Americans, both male and female, who view it as a symbol of unsettling and frightening change in the social status quo.

WITH FEROCIOUS AND emotional lobbying, opponents of the ERA have stopped the ratification drive in its tracks. Supporters of the amendment are understandably frustrated and fearful that the dream of 50 years may turn into a nightmare.

That is why Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., others in the congressional women's caucus and the leadership of the National Organization of Women (NOW) are asking Congress to extend the deadline for ratification for another seven years.

The Carter administration supports the extension. The Justice Department, and a bevy of their distinguished constitutional lawyers, say Congress has the right to do it. There are those who disagree, of course, but in all probability the Justice Department is correct. It can be done.

But should it be done? That is another matter indeed, a question which has become a source of growing anguish to many in the woman's movement. The only fair answer has to be "no."

EVERY CONSTITUTIONAL amendment adopted in the last 50 years, starting with the infamous Prohibition Amendment of 1917, carried with it a seven-year deadline for ratification by the states.

Prior to 1917, Congress had set no deadlines for ratification of amendments. Yet the longest period that ever elapsed between the proposal of a constitutional amendment by Congress and ultimate ratification by three-fourths of the states was three years and 11 months — for the 22 nd Amendment, guaranteeing citiens of the District of Columbia the right to vote in presidential elections.

Opponents of ERA, led by the ever-voluble Phyllis Schlafly of Illinois, are apoplectic over the attempt to persuade Congress to extend the ratification deadline.

With considerable justification, they charge that such a step would amount to changing the rules of the game in mid-play.

REP. HOLTZMAN and her allies sincerely believe the extension on legislation offers the last best hope of saving the ERA. Perhaps they are right, given the current political climate in the states which have not yet ratified the amendment.

Yet, it doesn't seem fair. There is still a chance to win ratification in the necessary three additional states before the March 1979 deadline originally set by Congress. It won't be easy, but it is not impossible.

And if it fails — so be it. Everyone knew the rules when Congress first passed the ERA, and those rules said ratification must come within seven years. Even for the best of causes, changing those rules now would be wrong.

Lenient penalty in vandal case

The Gerald Schubring family in Prospect Heights are justifiably wondering about the kind of justice available in Cook County.

The Schubrings came home from vacation in July to discover $9,000 in damage to their house — the result of senseless vandalism.

The culprits were six neighborhood boys, age 10 to 14. The boys were found guilty last week in a juvenile court hearing of criminal trespass and vandalism. Judge James Walton placed three of the boys on one-year probation, two under one-year court supervision and one under six months court supervision.

That was all. Neither the boys nor their parents were ordered to make restitution or even to apologize to the Schubrings for the crime. Only one parent of the six children has taken the initiative to call the family to express concern.

The court's action is much too lenient considering the losses suffered by the Schubrings. And while the boys involved had no previous record and certainly should not be treated as hardened criminals, the court should have at least impressed on them that their actions went beyond a "childish prank."

Nothing can replace some of the photographs or keepsakes that were destroyed by the vandals. And, perhaps, no payment for the damages could ever compensate the family for the shock of returning to find the damage.

However, justice was not served in the outcome of the Schubring case. Until such celebrated cases are dealt with more severely, the chances of eliminating vandalism are remote, and the innocent victims of vandalism will go uncompensated.

Soviet A-test idea good

It was appropriate that Leonid Brezhnev called for a worldwide ban on atomic tests as the Soviet Union began celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Despite economic setbacks, the Soviet Union in the past 60 years ahs risen from a backward country with a high illiteracy rate, to an industrialized, better-educated superpower capable of destroying much of the world with the push of a button.

Brezhnev, however, did more to demonstrate his country's power through his conciliatory gesture, than any May Day parade in Moscow could have with its demonstration of military hardware.

The Soviet leader's call for a halt to nuclear tests is an encouraging development towards an end of the nuclear arms race.

GOPs no longer partisan to Thompson

Steve Brown

From our Springfield bureau

Those good old days when partisan lawmakers hacked their governor's action in the Illinois General Asembly's fall veto session are clearly over.

The once time-honored principal was never more soundly trampled than in the first half of the legislature's autumn assemblage, which ended last week.

With Gov. James R. Thompson cast in the role of bugle boy blowing taps for tradition, Republican legislators made mincemeat of the practice of supporting the governor because he was the governor and not whether he was right or wrong.

TRUE, DEMOCRATS hold the advantage in both legislative houses, but vetoe overrides usually require more than a simple majority vote and Republicans helped to turn thumbs down on Thompson on several issues.

Lawmakers return here today for the final round of a session that threatens to leave Thompson with more vetoes overridden than Gov. Dan Walker had in four years, according to statistics developed by United Press International.

The two most noticeable defeats came on Illinois House overrides of vetoes of efforts to legalize Laetrile and ban state payments for abortions for public aid recipients.

Thompson said he was not surprised and he expects the Illinois Senate to follow suit. But the big emotional issues were not the only defeats for Thompson.

HE ALSO lost on a bill that could lead to less stringent state air pollution standards. Thompson was beaten on his veto of a bill sponsored by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, to give more health care to migrant workers. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, won an override of Thompson's veto of a bill to require the state pay the full cost of placing its mental patients in local programs.

Local lawmakers were not alone in their early success, but their bills were among the more important.

Thompson pointed to the Walker years in rationalizing his setbacks. He advanced the theory that Walker liked to scrap with the legislature and vetoed bills to promote those confrontations. Since the lawmakers became accustomed to overrides, the fact they are telling him where to get off is not that unusual, Thompson reasoned.

But Thompson has portrayed himself as the olive branch governor, willing to compromise rather than confront. Wholesale veto overrides are taking the edge off the image that this is the governor who has a lot of rapport with the lawmakers.

THOMPSON MIGHT be content to say changing times is the reason so many members of his party reject his advice, but there is matter of leadership at stake here.

Thompson's veto record might look better by Thanksgiving day, but casting Laetrile and abortion aside, because those are issues that should not be considered partisan political matters, a governor who cannot sustain his own vetoes may seem to the voters to be a questionable leader.

Thompson has been quick to point out that he balanced the budget. This is a nifty achievement, but some persons have to be reminded of this and others don't view doing what you are supposed to do as an accomplishment.

The preliminary defeats may not be devastating, but if the governor is having this much trouble in nonelection year 1977, think of the problems he is likely to have in election year 1978.

Senate's Big Six thrive on age

by IRA ALLEN
Commentary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's old reputation as a hidebound men's club where superannuated codgers shuffle around contemplating, delaying and sometimes legislating is not that much out of date.

Despite the ascendance of a crop of potentially powerful senators in their late 30s and early 40s — Joseph Biden, Sam Nunn, Paul Sarbarnes, to name a few — the Senate still is a preserve for the old and the male. And as recent events show, it still is able to put on a good filibuster.

As for age, consider this remarkable fact: of the 29 senators in history who have served 30 years or longer, six now are in the Senate. And they may stay for some time.

THE SIX, in order of seniority are: James Eastland, D-Miss., 35 years and one month; John McClellan, D-Ark., 34 years and 10 months; Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., 32 years and 11 months; Milton Young, R-N.D., 32 years and eight months; John Sparkman, D-Ala., 31 years; and John Stennis , D-Miss., 30 years.

Three of them — McClellan, Sparkman and Eastland — are up for reelection next year and none has ruled himself out. Stennis was reelected last year and Young and Magnuson are up again in 1980.

McClellan, the oldest at 81, has the longest continuing service on Capitol Hill, starting in the House in 1935.

Magnuson, although the youngest member of the Senate's senior six in terms of age, has set a longevity record for chairing the same committee longer than anyone else in history. He has presided over the Commerce Committee for more than 22 years.

EASTLAND IS next, having chaired the Judiciary Committee more than 20 years, followed by McClellan, with 18 years as head of the Government Operations Committee before he left that post for Appropriations in 1973.

Eastland could approach the all-time service record set by Carl Hayden of Arizona, who served 41 years and 10 months. But to do so he would have to serve out another full term to reach the longevity record in mid-1984.

GOPs no longer partisan to Thompson

Steve Brown

From our Springfield bureau

Those good old days when partisan lawmakers hacked their governor's action in the Illinois General Asembly's fall veto session are clearly over.

The once time-honored principal was never more soundly trampled than in the first half of the legislature's autumn assemblage, which ended last week.

With Gov. James R. Thompson cast in the role of bugle boy blowing taps for tradition, Republican legislators made mincemeat of the practice of supporting the governor because he was the governor and not whether he was right or wrong.

TRUE, DEMOCRATS hold the advantage in both legislative houses, but vetoe overrides usually require more than a simple majority vote and Republicans helped to turn thumbs down on Thompson on several issues.

Lawmakers return here today for the final round of a session that threatens to leave Thompson with more vetoes overridden than Gov. Dan Walker had in four years, according to statistics developed by United Press International.

The two most noticeable defeats came on Illinois House overrides of vetoes of efforts to legalize Laetrile and ban state payments for abortions for public aid recipients.

Thompson said he was not surprised and he expects the Illinois Senate to follow suit. But the big emotional issues were not the only defeats for Thompson.

HE ALSO lost on a bill that could lead to less stringent state air pollution standards. Thompson was beaten on his veto of a bill sponsored by State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, to give more health care to migrant workers. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, won an override of Thompson's veto of a bill to require the state pay the full cost of placing its mental patients in local programs.

Local lawmakers were not alone in their early success, but their bills were among the more important.

Thompson pointed to the Walker years in rationalizing his setbacks. He advanced the theory that Walker liked to scrap with the legislature and vetoed bills to promote those confrontations. Since the lawmakers became accustomed to overrides, the fact they are telling him where to get off is not that unusual, Thompson reasoned.

But Thompson has portrayed himself as the olive branch governor, willing to compromise rather than confront. Wholesale veto overrides are taking the edge off the image that this is the governor who has a lot of rapport with the lawmakers.

THOMPSON MIGHT be content to say changing times is the reason so many members of his party reject his advice, but there is matter of leadership at stake here.

Thompson's veto record might look better by Thanksgiving day, but casting Laetrile and abortion aside, because those are issues that should not be considered partisan political matters, a governor who cannot sustain his own vetoes may seem to the voters to be a questionable leader.

Thompson has been quick to point out that he balanced the budget. This is a nifty achievement, but some persons have to be reminded of this and others don't view doing what you are supposed to do as an accomplishment.

The preliminary defeats may not be devastating, but if the governor is having this much trouble in nonelection year 1977, think of the problems he is likely to have in election year 1978.

Senate's Big Six thrive on age

by IRA ALLEN
Commentary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's old reputation as a hidebound men's club where superannuated codgers shuffle around contemplating, delaying and sometimes legislating is not that much out of date.

Despite the ascendance of a crop of potentially powerful senators in their late 30s and early 40s — Joseph Biden, Sam Nunn, Paul Sarbarnes, to name a few — the Senate still is a preserve for the old and the male. And as recent events show, it still is able to put on a good filibuster.

As for age, consider this remarkable fact: of the 29 senators in history who have served 30 years or longer, six now are in the Senate. And they may stay for some time.

THE SIX, in order of seniority are: James Eastland, D-Miss., 35 years and one month; John McClellan, D-Ark., 34 years and 10 months; Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., 32 years and 11 months; Milton Young, R-N.D., 32 years and eight months; John Sparkman, D-Ala., 31 years; and John Stennis , D-Miss., 30 years.

Three of them — McClellan, Sparkman and Eastland — are up for reelection next year and none has ruled himself out. Stennis was reelected last year and Young and Magnuson are up again in 1980.

McClellan, the oldest at 81, has the longest continuing service on Capitol Hill, starting in the House in 1935.

Magnuson, although the youngest member of the Senate's senior six in terms of age, has set a longevity record for chairing the same committee longer than anyone else in history. He has presided over the Commerce Committee for more than 22 years.

EASTLAND IS next, having chaired the Judiciary Committee more than 20 years, followed by McClellan, with 18 years as head of the Government Operations Committee before he left that post for Appropriations in 1973.

Eastland could approach the all-time service record set by Carl Hayden of Arizona, who served 41 years and 10 months. But to do so he would have to serve out another full term to reach the longevity record in mid-1984.

Firefighters victorious over Calif. brush fire

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Firefighters Tuesday declared victory over a 1,100-acre brush fire that roared out of the hilltops of Topanga Canyon. The blaze, which had threatened to sweep to the sea destroying hundreds of homes in its path, consumed only six structures and caused no injuries.

Fire officials said an arsonist may have set the fire.

"We were saved from a major disaster by the winds," city Fire Dept. spokesman Doc Holloway said.

Fire Chief Al Evanson said the fire was contained — completely encircled by fire lines — at 12:30 p.m. Full control was predicted for later in the afternoon.

"We are mopping up hot spots now," Holloway said, "but we got the thing licked before the winds picked up again."

Hot, dry Santa Ana winds blowing toward the sea sent the blaze roaring out of control Monday afternoon at the top of the canyon, a semirural area covered with brush, oak and eucalyptus trees with 500 to 700 homes spread out within it.

Hundreds of persons were forced to flee, many leading horses to safety. Some stayed to water down roofs.

All Topanga Canyon residents were allowed to return to their homes during the night.

Abercrombie & Fitch's sell-out sale starts Thursday in Chicago

Abercrombie & Fitch, active in Chicago retailing since 1928, will begin its final sale Thursday, reducing all merchandise at its Wabash Avenue store as part of a chainwide liquidation sale.

The doors will open at 8 a.m. in the Chicago store, the firm's second largest after its 12-story Madison Avenue store in New York City.

The store's exotic merchandise will be reduced as much as 50 per cent and the sale will last as long as it takes to clear out the four-floor Chicago location, a corporate spokesman in New York said.

ABERCROMBIE & FITCH gained control of a Chicago sporting goods store, Von Langerke & Antoine, from 1928 to 1930, keeping the store's old name until 1959 when the Chicago operation became part of the parent company.

Abercrombie & Co. was founded in the late 1800s as a sporting goods store on South Street in lower Manhattan. In 1900, Ezra H. Fitch, a young lawyer and avid sportsman, acquired an interest in the store and the name became Abercrombie & Fitch.

After a series of moves, Abercrombie's took over its present New York headquarters. A log cabin, built by Fitch for his New York residence, still stands on top of the building.

When Abercrombie's final sale offering a 25 per cent to 50 per cent discount begins in New York and Chicago Thursday, similar sales will be on at its stores in San Francisco and Bal Harbour, Fla. Five other Abercrombie stores were closed earlier this year.

"Since 1970, Abercrombie had a general lack of capitalization," President John M. Wilson said. "The store has had problems since then."

THE ABERCROMBIE & Fitch name and its 300,000 customer list, which reads like an international who's who, will be sold, Wilson said. No decision has been reached on which company will inherit the Abercrombie legacy.

When Abercrombie has sold $8.5 million in inventory, the store will close. It has been operating under Chapter XI of the bankruptcy law.

Abercrombie's final curtain marks the end of an era: Its elephant guns, Arctic equipment, old touring cars, and improbable gifts will be mere remembrances of more adventurous and elegant times.

The store outfitted President Theodore Roosevelt on his African hunt. Herbert Hoover bought fishing tackle and Presidents Taft, Harding and Eisenhower were ardent golf equipment patrons. John Kennedy ordered rocking chairs, and Lyndon Johnson purchased barbecue grills. Gerald Ford also shopped at Abercrombie for a wide variety of items.

ABERCROMBIE supplied gear for most of the great exploration and hunting expeditions in this century. It equipped Admiral R. E. Peary for his successful discovery of the North Pole in 1909. Norwegian Explorer Roald Amundsen asked the store to outfit his airplane search for the North Pole.

Even after the remote parts of the globe were chartered by adventurous men, royalty and international sportsmen flocked to Abercrombie's.

King Hussein of Jordan bought deep-water fishing equipment and a $1,500 rod and reel. King Farouk of Egypt ordered shot guns. When the stock market took a nose dive in 1974, the Arab oil sheiks turned their backs on traditional investments and purchased Abercrombie's antique guns.

Coffee in short supply: producers

Coffee producers at a three-day meeting of the International Coffee Organization warned Tuesday that the availability of coffee will remain low in the next few years. In a statement issued following the second day of closed-door meetings by ICO coffee producers, delegates from some 20 countries noted 64 million bags of coffee reserves have been depleted in the past 12 years.

Nitrate, nitrite ban in meats asked

A coalition of consumer groups Tuesday asked the government for a total ban on the use of nitrates and nitrites in bacon, ham anl other meats, saying the cancer risk from the chemicals has been proven beyond a doubt. The American Meat Institute called the idea "ridicullous." In a petition directed at the Agriculture Dept., the community nutrition institute said "a substantial body of evidence conclusively demonsrates that nitrates and nitrites both are poisonous in themselves and form, either before or after ingestion, nitrosamines which are extremely potent carcinogens."

Industrial production up slightly

Industrial production, a barometer of economic activity and job availability, rose a sluggish 0.3 per cent in October, the Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday. The increase in the production of the nation's factories, mines and utilities, although slightly less than the 0.4 per cent rise in September, still was 6.8 per cent ahead of October, 1976, said the nation's central bank.

When industrial production increases, new job opportunities open for the unemployed. The industrial production gain for October was measured at an annual rate of 3.6 per cent, which would fall far short of the output necessary to make the national economy grow faster than it did last summer.

Soviets buy American corn

Soviet officials, who recently announced their 1977 grain harvest would be smaller than expected, have bought another 601,300 metric tons of American corn, the Agriculture Dept. said Tuesday. It was the second Soviet purchase announced in two days, strengthening administration forecasts that Russians will buy 15 million tons of American corn and wheat in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. In the last fiscal year, Soviets bought 6 million tons of grain. The latest announcement brings known Russian orders this year to slightly over 3 million tons, including 1.1 million tons or 40.4 million bushels of wheat and 1.9 million tons or 74.9 million bushels, of corn.

Alter steelworker no-strike pact

A dispute underlying the ongoing iron ore mine strike in Michigan and Minnesota has led the United Steelworkers of America and 10 major steel companies to alter a national no-strike agreement. A main stumbling block in settling the 3½-month strike by about 18,000 iron ore miners has been whether incentives are local in nature as the union claims, or national in nature and covered by the national contract as the industry argues. The walkout is the first major strike in the industry since 1959.

'78 U.S. autos to cost 6% more

Despite a slowing of production costs, U.S. automobile companies will charge an average 6 per cent more for 1978 model cars, the same rate of increase as last year, the administration said Tuesday. The council on wage and price stability, in its annual report on automobile price increases, also documented the surge in the sales of foreign-made cars. In the model year which ended Sept. 30, sales of imported autos climbed 40.5 per cent. It also suggested the American auto industry is holding down prices on subcompact cars this year to meet the foreign challenge. On the average, subcompact cars are priced at $92 below the 1977 model price, the study said.

AMEX to join electronic system

The American Stock Exchange said Tuesday it will join with other exchanges in an electronic linking system that will provide stock price information from competing markets. The intermarket system, first proposed by the New York and Pacific exchanges and later endorsed by the Philadelphia and Boston exchanges, has been described as a key step in the formation of a central market system mandated by Congress in 1975.

J. C. Penney marks profit gain

J. C. Penney Co., the retail giant, had a 20.3 per cent gain in profit in the third quarter to $1.15 a share from 97 cents a year ago as sales rose to $2.36 billion from $2.11 billion. Net income rose to $74.9 million from $62.3 million.

Xylitol may be cancer agent: study

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Institute of Dental Health said Tuesday it has dropped an experimental program involving the sweetener xylitol, used in Wrigley's "Orbit" gum, because of preliminary findings that the substance might cause cancer.

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration, which gave xylitol a limited clearance for use in dietary foods several years ago, said "it's too early to tell" if the decision will lead to a ban on use of the sweetener.

"We do not have enough information to make any decision yet," the spokesman said.

THE DENTAL institute said it was scrapping a new program under which 1,000 school children were being given gum with xylitol to determine its impact on tooth decay or the lack of it.

The tests were suspended because of preliminary information from a laboratory in England showing test animals fed the substance developed cancer.

Xylitol is a nutritive sweetener, unlike the artificial low-calorie sweetener saccharin which has no nutritive value.

In 1971 the FDA proposed to revoke use of xylitol in special dietary foods but a drug company asked for approval for continued use in chewing gum, jams, jellies and chewable vitamins.

The FDA said it was in the final stages of deciding on that petition when the new information came in from England.

THE AGENCY said the sweetener was being used in "Orbit" under the still outstanding approval for use in special dietary foods, although it was not clear how the chewing gum qualified for that category.

Larry Krull, a researcher as the Agriculture Department's Northern Regional Research Laboratory in Peoria, Ill., who had been working on the sweetener, said: "I'm really disappointed to hear this . . . many people in the industry were really looking to this as a way for farmers to use their agriculture residues."

The sweetener comes from a naturally occurring substance in corn husks, corn cobs, corn stalks and other material.

Wrigley shares close $8 down

Shares of the William Wrigley Jr. Co. fell sharply on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday in the wake of preliminary findings that a sweetener in Wrigley's "Orbit" gum might cause cancer.

Wrigley shares tumbled at the close of trading to $83.12½ down $8.37½ from Monday, and a $96.50 high last week.

Wrigley shares had sold for as little as $70.37½ this year. Market analysts could give no concrete explanation for last week's gain.

Time-of-day utility rates on the way

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — Time-of-day pricing on electrical bills is now breathing down our necks. Under this approach, utility rates are higher during daytime hours, to discourage use. During off-peak hours, rates fall.

If enough persons rearranged their lives to reduce daytime electricity demand, utilities wouldn't have to add extra generating capacity. There would be a great saving in money. To the extent that people cut down on their total use of electricity, for example, by turning off the air conditioner, it also would save energy.

For the past two years, utilities in about 20 states have run small time-of-day pricing experiments among residential customers who chose to participate. That phase seems to be over. With the enthusiastic backing of the new federal Dept. of Energy, a number of utilities now are switching to time-of-day rates, like it or not.

NEXT FALL, the Long Island (N.Y.) Lighting Co. inaugurates time-of-day rates for 900 customers who, by its standards, are energy hogs. These persons use energy at a rate seven times above average, for air conditioning, swimming pools, heating large houses and so on.

Studies by LILCO suggest that if these customers use electricity as before, the new rates will raise some bills by as much as 35 per cent and lower others by up to 26 per cent. To reduce a high bill, they'll have to change the way they live.

In Massachusetts, the Dept. of Public Utilities has just ordered utilities to draw up plans for switching entirely to time-of-day pricing. These rates will be mandatory for all customers.

Several utilities already have instituted mandatory peak-rate pricing for business customers. Users like department stores, which can't very well switch to all-night openings, find higher bills virtually unavoidable (passed on, of course, in consumer prices). Some industrial companies, however, have set up all-night shifts — saving electricity by forcing some employes to work nights.

ENTHUSIASTIC PROMOTERS of time-of-day pricing treat it like the greatest thing since Scotch Tape. But that all depends. What if it compels you or your spouse to work nights? What if you're forced by high rates to do the wash and other household chores after 10 p.m. or before 10 a.m.? Such a life could be especially hard on women.

Time-of-day pricing experiments in Vermont have used more reasonable hours: Peak-load rates apply only in the morning and from 5 to 8 p.m. at night, which at least gives women at home the afternoon to accomplish household chores. But it's of little help to women with outside jobs.

Jack Schenk of the Edison Electric Institute thinks customers should be able to choose between regular rates and time-of-day pricing. "We shouldn't rush into this kind of rate system for the general public," he says, "unless we know just what we're getting into."

Domestic car sales increase 14%

DETROIT (UPI) — Domestic car sales increased 14 per cent in the first 10 days of November, with smaller cars made by Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. pacing the advance.

Ford led domestic automakers with 10-day sales of 72,925, a 38.1 per cent gain over the same period last year. The increase was somewhat inflated because the No. 2 car company a year ago was just recovering from a strike.

GM sold 143,927 cars for a 9.8 per cent improvement. Chrysler sales were 29,926, less than a 1 per cent decline from a year earlier.

Struggling American Motors Corp. sold 5,370 cars during the period, a decrease of 14 per cent.

So far this year, the industry has sold 7.9 million domestic automobiles, about 8 per cent more than this time last year.

Self-managing investors turn to Charter Account

by JOHN N. FRANK

Investors active in trading and who like to manage their own accounts may find the Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company's new Charter Accounts fits their needs.

"This is designed as an account that investors who want to run their own accounts really need and desire," said Ted Read, office manager of one of the brokerage firm's Chicago offices.

The new account, which the firm began offering to new customers last month, has the following features:

• Weekly investment information bulletins provide account holders with help in investment decision-making.

• Records of trading by each account holder are kept by the brokerage firm in a form suitable for use in preparing income tax returns. This feature eliminates the need to hire an accountant to keep track of such transactions.

• Interest can be earned on money kept in the account after a sale and dividend income can be sent in monthly installments rather than quarterly payments.

• Insurance of up to $350,000 per account is provided. Securities must be left with the firm in this account.

• Money can be borrowed on the security holdings by the account holders. Repayment is required at an interest rate set by Smith Barney which fluctuates.

Perhaps the biggest advantage of the new account is its over-all cost. It is priced 20 per cent below the normal commission schedule, Read said. The account requires a fee of $300 be paid in addition to .0025 per cent of the net asset value of the account, he said. These fees are tax deductible.

Smith Barney hopes the new account will encourage investors who currently have accounts with the firm and other brokerage houses to consolidate their holdings with Smith Barney and thus increase the firm's business, Read said.

"This is another tool that we've added to a retail account executive's bag so he will be better equipped to aid the investor," Read said.

Self-managing investors turn to Charter Account

by JOHN N. FRANK

Investors active in trading and who like to manage their own accounts may find the Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company's new Charter Accounts fits their needs.

"This is designed as an account that investors who want to run their own accounts really need and desire," said Ted Read, office manager of one of the brokerage firm's Chicago offices.

The new account, which the firm began offering to new customers last month, has the following features:

• Weekly investment information bulletins provide account holders with help in investment decision-making.

• Records of trading by each account holder are kept by the brokerage firm in a form suitable for use in preparing income tax returns. This feature eliminates the need to hire an accountant to keep track of such transactions.

• Interest can be earned on money kept in the account after a sale and dividend income can be sent in monthly installments rather than quarterly payments.

• Insurance of up to $350,000 per account is provided. Securities must be left with the firm in this account.

• Money can be borrowed on the security holdings by the account holders. Repayment is required at an interest rate set by Smith Barney which fluctuates.

Perhaps the biggest advantage of the new account is its over-all cost. It is priced 20 per cent below the normal commission schedule, Read said. The account requires a fee of $300 be paid in addition to .0025 per cent of the net asset value of the account, he said. These fees are tax deductible.

Smith Barney hopes the new account will encourage investors who currently have accounts with the firm and other brokerage houses to consolidate their holdings with Smith Barney and thus increase the firm's business, Read said.

"This is another tool that we've added to a retail account executive's bag so he will be better equipped to aid the investor," Read said.

Heavy trading helps stocks to post broad gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, bolstered by a small bank's cut in its prime lending rate, overcame early profit taking Tuesday to post a broad gain in heavy trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly four points at the outset, rallied to gain 4.42 points to 842.78. It fell 7.53 points in profit taking Monday, after climbing 29.62 points in the previous three sessions.

Some analysts, pointing to last week's over-all 35-point gain that ended a 10-month slide, said the market may have kicked off a year-end rally early despite economic uncertainties.

Southwest Bank of St. Louis sparked afternoon buying when it lowered its prime lending rate a quarter point to 7½ per cent. None of the nation's major banks acted immediately to lower their rates from the prevailing 7¾ per cent level.

BUT SOUTHWEST added to speculation that interest rates have leveled off. Reports last week said New York banks were taking extraordinary steps to bolster their lagging business loan business.

Furthermore, recent rallies have been sparked by indications the Federal Reserve Board has eased its credit policies, taking pressure off of interest rates that have risen to two-year highs.

Against that background, the New York stock exchange common stock index rose 0.35 to 52.72 and the average price of a share jumped 20 cents.

It's the Canon NP-50. For low-to-medium copying requirements. It's engineered with rugged solid state technology. It's compact, produces clear, legible copies in statement, letter and legal size, on plain paper that can be written on immediately. And copy onto transparencies, labeled stock and colored paper.

It will replace copiers like the Xerox 660 and old fashioned electrofax copiers that use coated paper to produce copies that are tough to write on and read.

The Canon NP-50 is so reliable it greatly reduces your operating costs. And our suggested retail price of $2975 includes a handsome rollaway stand. Another savings.

Find out more about a whole new generation in copiers, call or write us today.

Bad drugs sold at top price: Nelson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some major drug firms are turning out bad and even life-threatening products and charging a premium price for them, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D.-Wis., says.

"The claims of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn. and its large members that the public can depend on the reputation of the manufacturer are absolutely ridiculous," Nelson said in opening hearings on the big price difference between brand name and generic drugs.

"The name of the manufacturer, as far as quality assurance is concerned, is irrelevant," he said.

TV Favorites

by Ed Landwehr

You hear many odd capers indulged in by TV fans. We had written about the tipsy watcher shooting out the TV tube to help a western hero in a bad guy tussle at Tex's saloon. And there's the exasperated wife who threw the TV set out of the window to get her husband's attention away from the football games. And one feathered brain burgler, while holding up a family, was distracted by watching a wrestling match just long enough for help to come pouncing down on the felon.

But the most charming and unselfish report we ever heard is the elderly couple who own a big console 25-inch TV set which they never get to use. It was bought merely to entertain friends. You see, they are blind.

I guess it proves that television must be just about the greatest entertainment in our lives. And at Landwehr's TV & Appliance Center, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights we're helping to keep them in efficient operation. That's why you should phone 255-0700 when you need service.

Heavy trading helps stocks to post broad gain

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, bolstered by a small bank's cut in its prime lending rate, overcame early profit taking Tuesday to post a broad gain in heavy trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly four points at the outset, rallied to gain 4.42 points to 842.78. It fell 7.53 points in profit taking Monday, after climbing 29.62 points in the previous three sessions.

Some analysts, pointing to last week's over-all 35-point gain that ended a 10-month slide, said the market may have kicked off a year-end rally early despite economic uncertainties.

Southwest Bank of St. Louis sparked afternoon buying when it lowered its prime lending rate a quarter point to 7½ per cent. None of the nation's major banks acted immediately to lower their rates from the prevailing 7¾ per cent level.

BUT SOUTHWEST added to speculation that interest rates have leveled off. Reports last week said New York banks were taking extraordinary steps to bolster their lagging business loan business.

Furthermore, recent rallies have been sparked by indications the Federal Reserve Board has eased its credit policies, taking pressure off of interest rates that have risen to two-year highs.

Against that background, the New York stock exchange common stock index rose 0.35 to 52.72 and the average price of a share jumped 20 cents.

Bad drugs sold at top price: Nelson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some major drug firms are turning out bad and even life-threatening products and charging a premium price for them, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D.-Wis., says.

"The claims of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn. and its large members that the public can depend on the reputation of the manufacturer are absolutely ridiculous," Nelson said in opening hearings on the big price difference between brand name and generic drugs.

"The name of the manufacturer, as far as quality assurance is concerned, is irrelevant," he said.

TV Favorites

by Ed Landwehr

You hear many odd capers indulged in by TV fans. We had written about the tipsy watcher shooting out the TV tube to help a western hero in a bad guy tussle at Tex's saloon. And there's the exasperated wife who threw the TV set out of the window to get her husband's attention away from the football games. And one feathered brain burgler, while holding up a family, was distracted by watching a wrestling match just long enough for help to come pouncing down on the felon.

But the most charming and unselfish report we ever heard is the elderly couple who own a big console 25-inch TV set which they never get to use. It was bought merely to entertain friends. You see, they are blind.

I guess it proves that television must be just about the greatest entertainment in our lives. And at Landwehr's TV & Appliance Center, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights we're helping to keep them in efficient operation. That's why you should phone 255-0700 when you need service.

Inflation's bite takes real chunck from governments

A new Illinois Municipal Price Index shows local municipalities face a higher inflation rate than most consumers. The reason is that the cost of manpower and other municipal materials is increasing faster than most consumer products.

"Taxpayers must understand that inflation erodes the purchasing power in the public sector by as much as, if not more than, household budgets," wrote Norman Walzer in a recent issue of the Illinois Municipal Review.

In the article, Walzer, an associate professor with the University of Illinois at Urbana, compares the municipal index with the Consumer Price Index from 1970 to 1976.

SERVICES THAT cost the consumer $100 in 1970 cost $146.60 in 1976, Walzer said. By comparison, municipalities costs increased to $151.10.

Local finance directors agree that their municipalities costs are increasing more dramatically than the private sector.

"People can't believe that we should be hit by the impact so much greater than anyone else," Mount Prospect Finance Director Richard Jesse said.

A major problem area for municipalities is insurance rates, which have doubled and tripled in the past few years.

"The losses in Cook County have been so horrendous that the company that was insuring us went out of business in Cook County," Des Plaines Finance Director Duane Blietz said. "We went to replace it and found that nobody wanted it."

BLIETZ SAID his town has seen a 52 per cent increase in the cost of medical insurance coverage. He said it is hard to put a figure on the increase in liability insurance rates because the village has been forced to accept a $100,000 deductible while still paying increased rates.

Blietz said another problem area is petroleum products, including gas, oil and asphalt.

"One of the areas would be gas and oil, and we are large consumers of that," he said. "That is definitely an area that has gone up steeply."

George Pokorny of Hanover Park said wages are the big problem in his town. "I would say probably one of the biggest impacts it has is in the way of wages," he said. "This is normally a big portion of the village budget since villages are a service organization."

Blietz said wage increases have the greatest impact in departments like police, fire and public works, where more than 60 per cent of the budget is for personnel. "As wages go up we are pushed with it," he said.

VILLAGES ALSO ARE heavily affected by the increasing cost of utilities. They must pay for street lights, water pumping and traffic signal operation. Each increase in the cost of postage is sharply felt.

Jesse said the inflationary spiral in Mount Prospect is most severe "in our water and sewer operation. Those prices have escalated as high as 50 per cent," he said about the cost of repair parts.

Keith Wendland, finance director of Hoffman Estates, said municipalities are caught in a double bind with inflation because their sources of revenue are so limited.

"I think part of our problem stems from the fact that most of us depend so heavily on property taxes and there are no new sources of revenue to finance services," he said.

Most of the finance directors said they use a combination of indexes to plan their budgets because no single index gives proper perspective.

Wendland, in fact, prepares his own informal index. "We prefer to talk to the people we do business with to find out what they are planning," he said.

Inflation's bite takes real chunck from governments

A new Illinois Municipal Price Index shows local municipalities face a higher inflation rate than most consumers. The reason is that the cost of manpower and other municipal materials is increasing faster than most consumer products.

"Taxpayers must understand that inflation erodes the purchasing power in the public sector by as much as, if not more than, household budgets," wrote Norman Walzer in a recent issue of the Illinois Municipal Review.

In the article, Walzer, an associate professor with the University of Illinois at Urbana, compares the municipal index with the Consumer Price Index from 1970 to 1976.

SERVICES THAT cost the consumer $100 in 1970 cost $146.60 in 1976, Walzer said. By comparison, municipalities costs increased to $151.10.

Local finance directors agree that their municipalities costs are increasing more dramatically than the private sector.

"People can't believe that we should be hit by the impact so much greater than anyone else," Mount Prospect Finance Director Richard Jesse said.

A major problem area for municipalities is insurance rates, which have doubled and tripled in the past few years.

"The losses in Cook County have been so horrendous that the company that was insuring us went out of business in Cook County," Des Plaines Finance Director Duane Blietz said. "We went to replace it and found that nobody wanted it."

BLIETZ SAID his town has seen a 52 per cent increase in the cost of medical insurance coverage. He said it is hard to put a figure on the increase in liability insurance rates because the village has been forced to accept a $100,000 deductible while still paying increased rates.

Blietz said another problem area is petroleum products, including gas, oil and asphalt.

"One of the areas would be gas and oil, and we are large consumers of that," he said. "That is definitely an area that has gone up steeply."

George Pokorny of Hanover Park said wages are the big problem in his town. "I would say probably one of the biggest impacts it has is in the way of wages," he said. "This is normally a big portion of the village budget since villages are a service organization."

Blietz said wage increases have the greatest impact in departments like police, fire and public works, where more than 60 per cent of the budget is for personnel. "As wages go up we are pushed with it," he said.

VILLAGES ALSO ARE heavily affected by the increasing cost of utilities. They must pay for street lights, water pumping and traffic signal operation. Each increase in the cost of postage is sharply felt.

Jesse said the inflationary spiral in Mount Prospect is most severe "in our water and sewer operation. Those prices have escalated as high as 50 per cent," he said about the cost of repair parts.

Keith Wendland, finance director of Hoffman Estates, said municipalities are caught in a double bind with inflation because their sources of revenue are so limited.

"I think part of our problem stems from the fact that most of us depend so heavily on property taxes and there are no new sources of revenue to finance services," he said.

Most of the finance directors said they use a combination of indexes to plan their budgets because no single index gives proper perspective.

Wendland, in fact, prepares his own informal index. "We prefer to talk to the people we do business with to find out what they are planning," he said.

CANCER DETECTION HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood presure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Agony and artistry collide in pro football

The quarterback was going down. The hard-charging lineman could have "touched him down," but he didn't. Instead, he mashed him.

Fran Tarkenton started to get up to call another play. He started to get up as he done 1,000 times before, but, with a look of surprise much more than pain, he discovered that he couldn't. His leg was broken.

The pass receiver was running a square-out route and grabbed the ball in full stride, sprinting at right angles with the sideline. He was going out of bounds anyway, but Roger Wehrli gave him a helpful two-handed shove.

THE KICKOFF RETURN came out to the 30. The ball carrier went down. Out of nowhere came the late hit. So many of them are unavoidable. This one was flagrant. No call.

Two plays later, Tony Dorsett was brought down with a vicious necktie tackle. Perfectly legal.

This is NFL football and it's getting more violent with every injury report.

The body count reached six quarterbacks this week, four of them with fractured legs including Tarkenton, who had escaped major injury through 17 years into the pro game.

A SIMPLE DROPBACK play was Tarkenton's undoing Sunday, a maneuver the Minnesota QB could execute in his sleep. Tarkenton's safety record over the years speaks not only for his courage and agility but for his common sense. When he sees a lineman coming at him like a berserk lumberjack, he ducks out of the way. He goes down if he must.

Sunday, Tarkenton was going down. But Cincinnati's Gary Burley didn't know that. Burley explained later that it was a clean hit — that he probably couldn't have stopped even if he wanted to.

But Burley also knew that Tarkenton has a knack for making linemen look foolish. How many times has The Scrambler ducked under a tackle (or three) only to come up throwing? Burley wasn't going to let that happen to him.

The same could be said for Wehrli, the St. Louis Cardinal cornerback, whose job depends on breaking up the pass any way he possibly can. It is unrealistic to suggest that Wehrli or any other football player should play with anything less than total abandon.

VIOLENCE IS AN important part of the game's appeal. And yet, the ever-increasing demand for victory creates more and more violence until, by the sheer force of it, violence could overrun the game itself someday.

Football is a violent game; it always has been. In some ways, the game was more violent 80 years ago than it is today. But it also can be an artistic game, a contest of brains and finesse and breathtaking beauty.

The artistry is at constant odds with the violence. One is weighed against the other in a duel for the upper hand, a duel that is carefully monitored and frequently orchestrated by the NFL's front office. Too much violence and the game becomes carnage; too much in the opposite direction and it becomes flag-football.

The wizardry of a Walter Payton run — meeting bone-crunching tackles full force with a stubborn resolve and uncanny equipoise — comes closest to defining the true nature of the love-hate polarity of violence and artistic flair. Payton is fast and shifty and resourceful and, in some ways, durable. But one solid hit or one wrong turn could end his career.

BEAR FANS WHO idolize Payton — and live a sort of fantasy life through his exploits — not long ago were worshiping Dick Butkus, a man who would destroy Payton's ilk with one blow from iis forearm.

The runner and the tackler (and the blockers) were once the key ingredients in football. The violence was simple and controlled, and penalty infractions were relatively easy to detect.

Then came the forward pass and violence reached new heights: intricate and subtle methods of holding in the interior line; crackback blocking; bump-and-run; head-hunting.

Passing isn't manly, one local high school coach has said, and in a perverse sense he is right. By passing the ball, the offense takes away the defense's prime weapon — brute violence. A pass receiver can run virtually unhindered for 20 or 30 yards. But protection for the pass receiver has steadily diminished over the years. The controversial one-bump rule leaves the receiver as vulnerable as a glass vase on a pool table.

THE QUARTERBACK isn't as lucky. He is a playtoy who can be raked over and buried and pushed into the ground like so much mulch. Pass-rushing is the most violent aspect of the sport, a bizarre charade that has been reduced to legalized bullfighting.

Without the violence of the defense, however, the artistry of the offense might prevail. The balance is a tenuous one.

Fran Tarkenton got away with his scrambling for so long that people tended to think of him as superhuman.

Actually, he was just lucky.

Hawks, Islanders tie

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Two third-period power-play goals produced a 1-1 tie between the Black Hawks and New York Islanders here Tuesday night — but the real stars were the goalies.

Phil Esposito of the Hawks and Billy Smith of the New York Islanders were nearly unbeatable in the nets, single-handedly keeping the free-skating game low scoring.

Rookie right wing Mike Bussy put the Islanders ahead 1-0 only 37 seconds into the final period when his shot from in front of the crease eluded Esposito. Hawks' defenseman Dal Tallon was sitting out a tripping call at the time.

BUT THE HAWKS made the most of their only power play opportunity of the game when Ivan Boldirev scored the tying goal only 27 seconds after Islanders' captain Clark Gilles was whistled for elbowing at 12:16 of the final period.

From there, both goalies were called upon to make several saves on difficult chances to preserve the tie. Esposito and Smith each stopped 30 shots during the game.

The Hawks, who have more ties than either wins or losses, expanded their Conn Smythe Division lead over idle Colorado to three points. They are 5-4-7.

Boldirev's goal, his fifth of the season and the Hawks' 10th power-play score, was set up by rookie Ted Bulley. He launched a shot at Smith, who was able to kick the puck away — only to have it travel to Boldirev waiting in front of the net.

BOLDIREV LEADS the Hawks in points with 11, having scored twice in the last two games.

Bossy's goal, assisted by Bryan Trottier and Denis Potvin, was his 12th of the year. Nine have come in the last 10 games. The 20-year-old has 20 points and currently ranks among the leading scorers in the NHL.

Bossy played last year for Laval in the Quebec Major (junior) Hockey League, leading his team in goals with 75 and points with 126.

Things began slowly for both teams, which skated through a scoreless first period that was without penalites as well.

IN THE SECOND, period, things warmed quickly when the Hawks' Keith Magnuson and the Islanders' Garry Howatt dropped their gloves while trailing a play. Both earned five-minute major penalties for fighting. Magnuson, who persisted even after linesmen tried to separate the two, also was given a 10-minute misconduct penalty.

The Hawks' Jim Harrison and Tallon also were sent to sit out two-minute penalties in the second period. It was the carry-over of Tallon's infraction that set up Bossy's third period power play goal.

The Islanders were penalized only twice: Howatt's five-minute major and Gilles' key elbow call in the third period. For the season, the Hawks have been penalized 326 minutes, and new York has been whistled for 176 minutes.

The Hawks and the Islanders are both strong defensive teams, ranking fourth in the league prior to the game in fewest goals allowed.

While the Hawks were coming off two losses over the weekend, the Islanders were returning to the ice after a 6-0 victory over the Washington Capitals Sunday.

The Hawks play the second game of their six-game road trip tonight against the New York Rangers in Madison Square Garden.

NU seeks new rule-abiding coach

by ED SAINSBURY
UPI Sports Writer

Johnny Pont has some tough ground rules in selection of his successor as Northwestern football coach.

Pont, who resigned Monday as coach but remains as athletic director, won't choose his successor. That will be up to Northwestern President Robert Strotz.

But Pont will recommend four or five candidates for the job, and his selections should carry some weight.

He's drawing no line on possible candidates. One of his staff of assistants will be considered. Applicants from other schools, possibly high school coaches, will earn his consideration and be granted interviews.

BUT PONT'S ground rules will apply to all of them. No. 1 will be, "Don't cheat. Abide by the rules."

"The coach has to understand that Northwestern is different in its approach," Pont said. "It's not a case of not wanting to win, but a case of winning Northwestern's way. Another thing is his feeling for athletes as individuals, not simply as bodies who block and tackle and nothing else.

"A man can't coach at Northwestern, I feel very strongly, without his adherence to Big Ten rules and NCAA rules, not only in fact but in spirit. You can always play by the rules.

"SOME PEOPLE I have known have said 'Let's beat it,' and others have said 'Hey, this is the rule, let's live by it." They ask players to do this or that, and then sneak around at the same time to find a way to beat it. That kind of coach can't coach for me."

Pont said he would be available to help his new coach talk to potential players, but that he would not be looking "over his shoulder."

"I'm not going to be a coach in the stand. I'll be his strongest supporter. If he wants to ask me to help, I'll be glad to, but if he doesn't, that's his job.

"I think his expertise and technical knowledge of the game is more than just the offensive and defensive ability. He must do things on game day. One of the more important adjustments is on game day. It's easy to sit in the office and work on the blackboard, but on game day when the opponents throw a curve ball, you'd better make adjustments."

THE FACT THAT two of his three children are in college and another approaching college, he said, were instrumental in his decision. "I wanted to be part of their life in college," he said.

"I decided our program was in good shape, and I have no apologies to make, nor do our players. There are reasons for our losses, but most people just read the bottom line and don't see what we see. We are not that far away."

Pont's teams in 22 years of coaching won 97 games, lost 121 and tied five.

Sugar Bowl to invite Big Ten loser

NEW ORLEANS — The Sugar Bowl, unable to interest Notre Dame in a post-season match against Southeastern Conference champion Alabama, will invite the loser of Saturday's Michigan-Ohio State game, the States-Item reported here Tuesday.

The newspaper said sixth-ranked Notre Dame, which defeated Alabama, 24-23, in the Dec. 31, 1973, Sugar Bowl, removed itself as a Sugar Bowl candidate and plans to accept a bid to the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

The winner of the Michigan-Ohio State game will represent the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl. Ohio State will receive the Rose Bowl invitation if the game ends in a tie.

Alabama, the nation's third-ranked team, obtained its Sugar Bowl bid by winning the Southeastern Conference title.

Ohio State is ranked fourth and Michigan fifth in this week's poll by the United Press International Board of Coaches. Both have 9-1 records.

Alabama also has a 9-1 record and is idle Saturday when bowl invitations can be officially offered.

The choice of Michigan or Ohio State will mark the first appearance by a Big Ten team in the Sugar Bowl. It also will be the first encounter between Alabama Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant and a Big Ten squad.

Tarkenton gets apology for injury

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Bengal defensive end Gary Burley has sent a formal apology to Minnesota Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton for the play in which Tarkenton was injured for the rest of the season.

Burley, an intense 6-3, 262-pound lineman, sacked the star quarterback on a third-quarter play last Sunday in which Tarkenton's leg was broken. The Vikings beat the Bengals 42-10.

Tarkenton said of Burley's tackle, "It wasn't a dirty play." Nonetheless, Burley sent the apology which follows:

"Dear Fran,

"My first season in the NFL, I was injured and out for the season. In your 17-yer pro career, you have missed but one game. In my aggressive play Sunday, on a day in which you were superb, I injured you.

"Frank, I am truly sorry, for you have contributed so much to the National Football League. I wish you a speedy recovery and the best of luck in your future play.

Sincerely,
Gary Burley,
Cincinnati Bengals."

Lincoln S&L Road Race gets off mark Sunday

The second annual Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Assn. Road Run will be Sunday at Hoffman Estates High School starting at 1 p.m., with trophies going to top placers and T-shirts going to all finishers.

The featured race will be 10,000 meters through the streets of Hoffman Estates. The race will begin and end at the high school. There also will be a 5,000-meter event and a joggers' mile.

Returning to defend his title in the 10,000 meters race will be Jim Macnider, cross country coach at Schaumburg High School. Macnider, runnerup in the Daley Marathon in September, will attempt to improve on his 1976 record-setting time of 31:09.

The defending champion in the high school division is Palatine's Tom Johnson, who recently finished ninth in the state cross country championships.

Tonsillitis sidelines Bears' Jeff Sevy

Defensive end Jeff Sevy was hospitalized Tuesday with tonsillitis, the Berrs announced. Coach Jack Pardee said Sevey would be released Wednesday, but nothing was definite about his condition. The Bears host the Minnesota Vikings Sunday at Soldier Field.

Poor game attendance adds to woe

U of I struggles with big debt

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Fighting Illini officials watched in dismay Saturday as 37,697 fans braved the cold to watch Minnesota and Kent Kitzmann hand the University of Illinois its second straight shutout, 21-0, and its seventh loss in 10 games.

Saturday the "state championship" game at Northwestern probably won't attract half that many viewers.

Such meager attendance figures aren't exactly encouraging to athletic director Cecil Coleman and an athletic board wrestling with weighty financial problems.

Frankly, they're faced with a whopper. An anticipated $4 million is needed to renovate crumbling Memorial Stadium in order to keep it playable in the 1980s. The face-lifting is geared to begin next spring and continue through three spring-summer seasons.

"WE HAVE NO choice. This is something that has to be done," explains Coleman, recuperating from major hip surgery but very much back on the job.

"We have to solve the financial end of it. Otherwise we could wind up playing all our games on the road someday. And I certainly don't foresee that."

Coleman, labeled a "businessman" when he replaced Gene Vance as director, inherited an athletic department which had no monetary reserves, heavy debts and a "monster" of a stadium which had gradually deteriorated for the better part of a half-century.

He has already poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into the 53-year-old structure for Astro-Turf, lights and a variety of repairs. Now the time has come for the big decision. The stadium must be water-proofed to halt advanced rust and decay, and plans call for the sealing of the top side of the upper decks in 1978. The entire operation would continue through 1979 and 1980.

"WE ARE STUDYING every possible means to come up with the money," said Coleman. "We can borrow more money, and we will hear a recommendation on bonding procedures. At the same time, we are looking for state and university help (public funds).

"We have reason to believe the present governor (James Thompson) may be more favorable than the last one (Dan Walker)," said Coleman. "We intend to invite Thompson to one of our board meetings. Remember, we previously had an appropriation through the House, and we had enough votes to get it through the Senate, but we pulled back because the governor (with veto power) was unsympathetic."

The Athletic Assn. is already paying $130,000 annually on a seven-figure, multi-year debt (to be refinanced in 1982). At the same time, the Athletic Assn. is taking in over $100,000 for stadium repair each year via a 50-cent "tax" on each football ticket, and has also built up in Coleman's last five years more than $700,000 in an unappropriated bank surplus.

"WE ARE ON a sound financial basis," says Coleman, "but we can't accomplish the renovation alone. We have to get over this hump. Once that is accomplished, I'm confident Gary Moeller will have our football program upgraded to a point where we will draw the fans necessary to support everything.

"Generally speaking, we need 55,000 fans per game to operate soundly in the black. We were over that figure until the Minnesota game."

To boost next season's attendance, Coleman moved the Northwestern game up front in a modest five-game home schedule that does not include Michigan and Ohio State.

The solution to a $4 million puzzle does not lie in the immediate schedule of football games. So Coleman and his boardmen are searching for alternate means to solve the dilemma. It is a problem that will consume the association's administrators in the future.

Do you know about the home heating system that pulls energy out of thin air?

Introducing the heat pump.

Scientists have known for centuries that the air around us is a storehouse of heat energy. But it's only been in recent years that they were able to develop an efficient way to tap that abundant resource—the heat pump. Today, it is the only commercially available heating system that provides an answer to shrinking supplies of other fuels.

How the heat pump works:
Basically, the heat pump moves heat from one place to another. It uses electricity to extract heat from a limitless source—the heat in outdoor air. During winter, enough heat remains in the air—even on the coldest and cloudiest days—to be extracted by the pump and transferred indoors as clean, flameless heat.

And during warm weather, the process automatically reverses, removing excess indoor heat and humidity like an air conditioner.

Better efficiency.
In short, the heat pump does the job of both a furnace and an air conditioner. But there's an important difference. In northern Illinois the heat pump can produce more than 1½ units of heat energy for every unit it consumes. That's better efficiency than any other current heating system. That could mean significant long-term savings on heating costs.

To get the full advantages of the heat pump, it's important to get a quality product, properly installed and reliably serviced. For the name of qualified installers in your area, call G. W. Berkheimer Co. (Westinghouse Distributors), 312-374-4411; General Electric Co., 312-496-6356; Lennox Industries, Inc., 312-593-2820; or Temperature Equipment Corp. (Carrier Distributors), 312-681-6220. If you want additional heat pump information, call your local Commonwealth Edison office and talk to one of our marketing engineers.

The second annual Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Assn. Road Run will be Sunday at Hoffman Estates High School starting at 1 p.m., with trophies going to top placers and T-shirts going to all finishers.

The featured race will be 10,000 meters through the streets of Hoffman Estates. The race will begin and end at the high school. There also will be a 5,000-meter event and a joggers' mile.

Returning to defend his title in the 10,000 meters race will be Jim Macnider, cross country coach at Schaumburg High School. Macnider, runnerup in the Daley Marathon in September, will attempt to improve on his 1976 record-setting time of 31:09.

The defending champion in the high school division is Palatine's Tom Johnson, who recently finished ninth in the state cross country championships.

Tonsillitis sidelines Bears' Jeff Sevy

Defensive end Jeff Sevy was hospitalized Tuesday with tonsillitis, the Berrs announced. Coach Jack Pardee said Sevey would be released Wednesday, but nothing was definite about his condition. The Bears host the Minnesota Vikings Sunday at Soldier Field.

Poor game attendance adds to woe

U of I struggles with big debt

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Fighting Illini officials watched in dismay Saturday as 37,697 fans braved the cold to watch Minnesota and Kent Kitzmann hand the University of Illinois its second straight shutout, 21-0, and its seventh loss in 10 games.

Saturday the "state championship" game at Northwestern probably won't attract half that many viewers.

Such meager attendance figures aren't exactly encouraging to athletic director Cecil Coleman and an athletic board wrestling with weighty financial problems.

Frankly, they're faced with a whopper. An anticipated $4 million is needed to renovate crumbling Memorial Stadium in order to keep it playable in the 1980s. The face-lifting is geared to begin next spring and continue through three spring-summer seasons.

Loren Tate

"WE HAVE NO choice. This is something that has to be done," explains Coleman, recuperating from major hip surgery but very much back on the job.

"We have to solve the financial end of it. Otherwise we could wind up playing all our games on the road someday. And I certainly don't foresee that."

Coleman, labeled a "businessman" when he replaced Gene Vance as director, inherited an athletic department which had no monetary reserves, heavy debts and a "monster" of a stadium which had gradually deteriorated for the better part of a half-century.

He has already poured hundreds of thousands of dollars into the 53-year-old structure for Astro-Turf, lights and a variety of repairs. Now the time has come for the big decision. The stadium must be water-proofed to halt advanced rust and decay, and plans call for the sealing of the top side of the upper decks in 1978. The entire operation would continue through 1979 and 1980.

"WE ARE STUDYING every possible means to come up with the money," said Coleman. "We can borrow more money, and we will hear a recommendation on bonding procedures. At the same time, we are looking for state and university help (public funds).

"We have reason to believe the present governor (James Thompson) may be more favorable than the last one (Dan Walker)," said Coleman. "We intend to invite Thompson to one of our board meetings. Remember, we previously had an appropriation through the House, and we had enough votes to get it through the Senate, but we pulled back because the governor (with veto power) was unsympathetic."

The Athletic Assn. is already paying $130,000 annually on a seven-figure, multi-year debt (to be refinanced in 1982). At the same time, the Athletic Assn. is taking in over $100,000 for stadium repair each year via a 50-cent "tax" on each football ticket, and has also built up in Coleman's last five years more than $700,000 in an unappropriated bank surplus.

"WE ARE ON a sound financial basis," says Coleman, "but we can't accomplish the renovation alone. We have to get over this hump. Once that is accomplished, I'm confident Gary Moeller will have our football program upgraded to a point where we will draw the fans necessary to support everything.

"Generally speaking, we need 55,000 fans per game to operate soundly in the black. We were over that figure until the Minnesota game."

To boost next season's attendance, Coleman moved the Northwestern game up front in a modest five-game home schedule that does not include Michigan and Ohio State.

The solution to a $4 million puzzle does not lie in the immediate schedule of football games. So Coleman and his boardmen are searching for alternate means to solve the dilemma. It is a problem that will consume the association's administrators in the future.

Do you know about the home heating system that pulls energy out of thin air?

Introducing the heat pump.

Scientists have known for centuries that the air around us is a storehouse of heat energy. But it's only been in recent years that they were able to develop an efficient way to tap that abundant resource—the heat pump. Today, it is the only commercially available heating system that provides an answer to shrinking supplies of other fuels.

How the heat pump works:
Basically, the heat pump moves heat from one place to another. It uses electricity to extract heat from a limitless source—the heat in outdoor air. During winter, enough heat remains in the air—even on the coldest and cloudiest days—to be extracted by the pump and transferred indoors as clean, flameless heat.

And during warm weather, the process automatically reverses, removing excess indoor heat and humidity like an air conditioner.

Better efficiency.
In short, the heat pump does the job of both a furnace and an air conditioner. But there's an important difference. In northern Illinois the heat pump can produce more than 1½ units of heat energy for every unit it consumes. That's better efficiency than any other current heating system. That could mean significant long-term savings on heating costs.

To get the full advantages of the heat pump, it's important to get a quality product, properly installed and reliably serviced. For the name of qualified installers in your area, call G. W. Berkheimer Co. (Westinghouse Distributors), 312-374-4411; General Electric Co., 312-496-6356; Lennox Industries, Inc., 312-593-2820; or Temperature Equipment Corp. (Carrier Distributors), 312-681-6220. If you want additional heat pump information, call your local Commonwealth Edison office and talk to one of our marketing engineers.

Professional bowlers still fail to strike it rich

GLENDALE HEIGHTS — Bowling, perhaps the nation's most popular participant sport with more than 48 million enthusiasts, ironically is still struggling for recognition and the big-money image of golf and tennis at the professional level.

Even this week's lucrative $100,000 Brunswick World Open here would be small potatoes for a Jack Nicklaus or Jimmy Connors.

A check for $14,000 will be presented to the kingpin of Northern Bowl Saturday. Not $40,000 and a new car. Not $50,000 winner-take-all. It's more like a caddy's fee.

THE WORLD OPEN champion will not donate half his winnings to charity. Instead, he'll be thinking how to make ends meet at the next stop on the tour.

Why the discrepancy? Are pro bowlers less skilled than golfers or tennis players? Are they pseudo-athletes?

"Sure I'm jealous of professional golfers and tennis players," eight-year veteran Roy Buckley said. "I've won about $300,000 on the bowling tour and that would translate into about $2 million on the golf tour.

"I'm not saying that golfers and tennis players are overpaid," Buckley said. "I'm saying that professional bowlers are underpaid."

TENNIS' LEADING money winner this year, Jimmy Connors, has bankrolled more than $400,000 while golf's top earner, Tom Watson, has cashed in for $310,653. Mark Roth leads all bowlers with $89,083 won.

The most glaring disparity between the probowling tour and its sister golf and tennis competition is spectator admission, which is dependent upon facilities.

Thousands of fans are able to line the fairways of professional golf tournaments and completely enclose a tennis court, appreciably sweetening the pot for the players through ticket prices.

A STRICT FIRE CODE ordinance in Glendale Heights will allow just 400 to 500 spectators to view the proceedings at any one time. Once the limit is reached, they lock the doors.

The atmosphere at Northern Bowl is intimate, to say the leest. The main aisle is a miniature Dan Ryan Expressway during rush hour and the impromptu bleachers are filled to capacity.

But it's one of the few sports that permit the interaction of athlete and fan. It's hearing Earl Anthony coax his hooking ball into the 1-2 pocket. It's spilling a drink on Mark Roth, who is hurrying to the fast-food machine between frames.

"To be financially competitive with the golf and tennis tour, the answer is one word: Arena," the youthful and stylish Ernie Schlegel said. "With the money generated from paid admissions, we could be right in their class.

"There's a bowling center in Detroit called Thunderbird Lanes that was specially built for the spectator with theater-type seating all the way up an incline," Schlegel, who calls his home town U.S.A., said.

"THE PLACE WILL hold 5,000 people, which would put us in the same ball park as the golfers and tennis players."

But centers such as Thunderbird Lanes are rare in America. They're not profitable to own or run for the proprietor who makes his living from the once-a-week, 137-average bowler.

Television coverage of the finals of tournaments during the fall season have helped to increase the over-all purse.

"Sponsors are the life-line for bowlers," 25-year-old bachelor Frank Ellenburg, of Mesa, Ariz., said, "The more sponsors we get, the bigger the pots. They hold the key to our future.

"WE'VE CONSIDERED televising the summer tour, too," he said. "But the fear is overexposure. If we beat it to death, nobody will care. With the schedule we have now, it's still one of the most popular shows during the fall."

Buckley offered still another source of revenue that would pump the bowler's pool to the levels of golf and tennis.

"If every sanctioned bowler contributes one dime to the professional bowler's tournament, we could be bowling for $50,000 first prizes every week, too," he said. "But all it takes is one person to say 'no' and the idea is shot."

ELLENBURG SEEMED the least concerned about how much money was coming or where it was coming from. "I'm doing what I like for a living and even though I might only make $12,000 a year, I'm enjoying it. The money will take care or itself as long as I attain the goals I have set for myself."

Winning this week's Brunswick World Open would fit nicely into those plans.

The Pistons, playing without starting center Bob Lanier, got a 22-point performance from guard Eric Money and 19 from Ralph Simpson, a former Denver Nugget.

A FIGHT BROKE out in the third quarter, clearing the benches of both teams, when veteran Denver guard Mack Calvin threw a punch at Detroit guard Chris Ford. Calvin was ejected from the game, the first time in eight years as a professional.

Bill Walton scored 32 points and Maurice Lucas had 18 to spark the Portland Trailblazers to a 109-106 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Milwaukee's Dave Meyers had 32 points, one point over his former career high set last year. Brian Winters had 14 and Walton and Quinn Buckner 10 apiece.

Doug Collins led an 11-point Philadelphia spurt in the third quarter that gave the 76ers a 114-93 win over the Atlanta Hawks.

The game stayed close until midway in the third period, when an 11-point burst raised the Philadelphia lead to 73-57. With 3:28 left in the same quarter Philadelphia and expanded the lead to 21 points, the Hawks never got within 14 the rest of the game.

THE 76ERS JULIUS Erving led all scorers with 23 points while Collins got 22. John Drew's 19 points was high for the Hawks and Ollie Johnson had 13.

Elvin Hayes, Kevin Grevey and Bob Dandridge combined for 61 points in leading the Washington Bullets to a 111-109 NBA victory over the Seattle Supersonics.

Washington, helped by eight of Grevey's 20 points, held off a late Seattle rally. Gus Williams, who finished with a game-high 23 points led the Sonics' surge with six fourth quarter points.

Bob McAdoo scored 34 points and Spencer Haywood 18 and the New York Knicks capitalized on a third-quarter spurt en route to a 108-105 victory over New Orleans, the Jazz' sixth straight defeat.

Pete Maravich, the mainstay of the Jazz' offense, hit just one outside shot all game. The WBA's second-leading scorer had 11 points, 17 below his average.

Larry Kenon struck for 20 second half points to lead the San Antonio Spurs to their fourth consecutive win, a 113-107 decision over the Kansas City Kings.

Kenon wound up with 24 points and nine rebounds to lead the Spurs in both categories.

Ricky Sobers led a balanced Indiana attack with 23 points and seven assists in helping the Pacers snap a six-game losing streak with a 100-94 triumph over the Buffalo Braves.

Late power play earns St. Louis tie with Capitals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Brian Sutter got his first goal of the season on a power play with eight minutes remaining Tuesday night to earn the St. Louis Blues a 2-2 tie with the Washington Capitals in the NHL.

With Dave Forbes off for hooking, Sutter deflected a shot from the point by rookie defenseman Jack Brownschidle past Washington goalie Gary Smith.

Washington had taken a 2-1 lead midway through the third period on rookie Mark Lofthouse's first goal in the National Hockey League. St. Louis goalie Eddie Johnston kicked out a backhanded shot by Lofthouse, who put in the rebound from just in front of the crease.

Bob Sirois also put in his own rebound from a scramble in front of the net with five minutes to go in the second period to tie it at 1-1 for the Capitals.

Three minutes earlier, Garry Unger fired a high shot past Smith on a break away to put the Blues ahead 1-0.

The tie kept Washington winless in their last 10 games with a 0-7-3. record.

Both rock and sock on new Philly team

NEW YORK — Rock superstars Mick Jagger, Paul Simon and Peter Frampton joined a new band with 17 other investors Tuesday when they were awarded the new Philadelphia franchise in the North American Soccer League.

Jagger, Simon and Frampton, three of the most popular rock singers in the world, invested "substaintially," according to NASL sources, in what will be the league's 22nd team.

The league also approved the transfer of the Hawaii club to Tulsa, Okla., and gave conditional approval for moving the Las Vegas team to San Diego.

Commissioner Phil Woosnam and the executive committee of the NASL were authorized to complete the league makeup by Wednesday and were empowered to select a maximum of two additional franchises from applicants from Boston, Houston and Montreal. If the offers are accepted, it could bring the NASL total to 24 clubs for the 1978 season.

Zikes moves up at World Open Bowl

GLENDALE HEIGHTS, Ill. — Les Zikes of Palatine came up with one of the top ten efforts of the day as the World Open Professional Bowling Tournament moved toward its first cutoff point Tuesday.

Zikes, who wasn't even listed among the top 24 bowlers after Monday's opening session, averaged nearly 216 over his eight-block set Tuesday for a 16-game total of 1725 and 14th place among the 192-man field.

After Wednesday's round, the competition will be trimmed down to 48 bowlers and it will be further reduced another two times before the five-man finals are nationally televised Saturday.

The top five after Tuesday (with their totals) were Marshall Holman (3675), Dick Ritger (3594), Pete Cuoture (3573), Dave Frame (3554) and Gary Patterson (3502).

Madden punctures Oiler accusation

OAKLAND — Oakland Raiders Coach John Madden says the latest flap about punter Ray Guy using helium-filled footballs is a lot of hot air.

Following Sunday's 34-29 loss to the Raiders, Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips reportedly complained Guy might be using a helium filled ball in his booming sky-high punts which kept the Oilers in a hole all afternoon.

But Madden responded Monday: "The officials control the balls. They have 24 of them in their locker room before the game, and they inflate them to the prescribed pressure."

Raider Executive Assistant Al LoCasale added, "The whole thing is ridiculous. When the officials get the balls, they aren't even out of the box or the cellophane yet."

The Super Bowl champion Raiders have been accused of other stunts in the past. Several years ago, the Pittsburgh Steelers accused them of greasing their jerseys.

Brewers close to signing Hisle

MILWAUKEE — Outfielder Larry Hisle, the American League's RBI leader with the Minnesota Twins last season, said Monday he believes he's close to contract agreement with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I am tickled to death about Milwaukee. I hope that my agent and the Brewers can get something formalized," Hisle told sportswriter Lou Chapman of The Milwaukee Sentinel.

But he said offers from the New York Yankees, California Angels and the Twins were still being considered.

Hisle, picked No. 1 by the Brewers in the re-entry draft, said he also would like to see the Brewers sign Lyman Bostock, his outfield teammate and friend with the Twins. Bostock was the Brewers' No. 2 selection.

Unsolemn Solomon faces loss

LONDON — Fifth-seeded American Harold Solomon blew his cool and a possible $1,350 Tuesday during an explosive 75-minute appearance in the $135,000 Grand Prix tennis championships.

The 25-year-old clay court specialist was beaten, 7-6, 7-6, on two tie-breakers in his first round match against Sweden's Davis Cupper Ove Bengtson and was also reported for five offenses in the process.

Umpire Mike Lugg said he had called Solomon twice for searing, twice for throwing his racket and once for deliberately hitting the ball out of court. Solomon later swore at the umpire in the corridor, said Lugg, and this was also being reported to the representative of the ATP Council.

The offenses on court, plus the later swearing incident, add up in fines totaling $1,350 if upheld by the ATP. Solomon, who withdrew from the doubles saying he was unfit, will end up losing $170 for his work since he receives only $1,180 as a first round loser.

Red Wings pick up two WHA stars

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings Tuesday acquired center Vaclay "Big Ned" Nedomansky and right winger Tim Sheehy from the Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association in the biggest trade ever between hockey's two warring leagues.

The resurgent Red Wings gave up two defensemen they've never used — benchwarmer Steve Durbano and minor leaguer Dave Hanson, now assigned to the Kansas City Wings — plus undisclosed future considerations.

Nedomansky, a Czechoslovakian defector who was the first eastern European to join professional hockey in this country, surpassed the 100-goal plateau early in his third season. Sheehy, picked by the Red Wings in the National Hockey League's 1966 amateur draft, has played in more WHA games than any other player — 408.

DALLAS — Losing is apparently harder to take when your team hasn't lost in a while. At least that is the way it seemed Tuesday with Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

"It wasn't a very good night," Landry surmised. "It's hard to shake it off the next morning."

Dallas' 24-17 setback against the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night was the first loss of the season for the Cowboys, who still own a two game division lead.

Sports people

Air Force Academy kicking specialist Scott Schafer, a former all-conference quarterback from Conant, was voted Offensive Player of the Week last Saturday for his punting display against Army — Tennessee State University football coach John Merritt was given special police protection for the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga game after receiving two threatening telephone calls.

The Houston Astros have signed their number one pick in the free agent draft, former Chicago Cub relief pitcher Oscar Zamora — While former area star Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies was collecting a full $9,661.37 World Series share, another local product, Dave Kingman, picked up just $200 for his stint with the New York Yankees.

The Daily Herald's "Pick the Winners" Football Contest is literally all tied up.

They were 12-year-old Ray Owens and 32-year-old Edward R. Tomashewski. Both made only two incorrect choices.

Ray's mistakes were choosing New Orleans to beat San Francisco and New York Jets to defeat Seattle.

Ed's miscues included the Seattle-Jet game and Air Force stopping Vanderbilt.

The tie-breaker game was no help, because both correctly picked the final point total (28) for both teams. Incidentally, Slippery Rock and Clarion played to a (you guessed it) 14-14 tie.

Owens, a student at Rand Jr. High School in Arlington Heights, explained he goes with the favorites. "I just take the teams I think will win, usually the favorites," he said.

Ray Owens

Ed Tomashewski

Tomashewski cited a number of factors for his success. "I just follow it (football) quite a bit," said this Schaumburg resident who works in the automobile loans department at American National Bank in Chicago. "I get a lot of my information from your reports (The Daily Herald Sports.)"

Tomashewski mentioned he did not enter the contest until this past week, because there was no high school games to select.

Ed, who won two years ago, said his wife, Ann, helped him with his selections.

The two winners received a free Thermos Kit and are eligible for a free trip for two to the Rose Bowl game, including transportation and hotel accommodations.

Last week's college scores were Iowa 24, Wisconsin 8; Yale 24, Harvard 7; Arkansas 26, Texas A & M 20; Missouri 41, Oklahoma State 14; Mississippi 43, Tennessee 14; Minnesota 21, Illinois 0; Air Force 34, Vanderbilt 28; Michigan 40, Purdue 7; and Oklahoma 52, Colorado 14.

Professional scores were Minnesota 42, Cincinnati 14; Pittsburgh 35, Cleveland 31; Denver 17, San Diego 14; Atlanta 17, Detroit 6; Miami 17, New England 5; New York Giants 10, Tampa Bay 0; San Francisco 10, New Orleans 7; Seattle 17, New York Jets 0; Washington 17, Philadelphia 14, and Chicago 28, Kansas City 27.

The tie-breaker game was Slippery Rock 14, Chicago State 14.

Final individual statistics for the game show Spinato running 13 times for 120 yards and Pedigo eight carries for 110 yards.

Final team totals reflect Hoffman's domination. The Rams netted 11 first downs to North Austin's two and gained 250 yards rushing to the Cardinals' 70.

Both rock and sock on new Philly team

NEW YORK — Rock superstars Mick Jagger, Paul Simon and Peter Frampton joined a new band with 17 other investors Tuesday when they were awarded the new Philadelphia franchise in the North American Soccer League.

Jagger, Simon and Frampton, three of the most popular rock singers in the world, invested "substaintially," according to NASL sources, in what will be the league's 22nd team.

The league also approved the transfer of the Hawaii club to Tulsa, Okla., and gave conditional approval for moving the Las Vegas team to San Diego.

Commissioner Phil Woosnam and the executive committee of the NASL were authorized to complete the league makeup by Wednesday and were empowered to select a maximum of two additional franchises from applicants from Boston, Houston and Montreal. If the offers are accepted, it could bring the NASL total to 24 clubs for the 1978 season.

Zikes moves up at World Open Bowl

GLENDALE HEIGHTS, Ill. — Les Zikes of Palatine came up with one of the top ten efforts of the day as the World Open Professional Bowling Tournament moved toward its first cutoff point Tuesday.

Zikes, who wasn't even listed among the top 24 bowlers after Monday's opening session, averaged nearly 216 over his eight-block set Tuesday for a 16-game total of 1725 and 14th place among the 192-man field.

After Wednesday's round, the competition will be trimmed down to 48 bowlers and it will be further reduced another two times before the five-man finals are nationally televised Saturday.

OAKLAND — Oakland Raiders Coach John Madden says the latest flap about punter Ray Guy using helium-filled footballs is a lot of hot air.

Following Sunday's 34-29 loss to the Raiders, Houston Oiler Coach Bum Phillips reportedly complained Guy might be using a helium filled ball in his booming sky-high punts which kept the Oilers in a hole all afternoon.

But Madden responded Monday: "The officials control the balls. They have 24 of them in their locker room before the game, and they inflate them to the prescribed pressure."

Raider Executive Assistant Al LoCasale added, "The whole thing is ridiculous. When the officials get the balls, they aren't even out of the box or the cellophane yet."

The Super Bowl champion Raiders have been accused of other stunts in the past. Several years ago, the Pittsburgh Steelers accused them of greasing their jerseys.

Brewers close to signing Hisle

MILWAUKEE — Outfielder Larry Hisle, the American League's RBI leader with the Minnesota Twins last season, said Monday he believes he's close to contract agreement with the Milwaukee Brewers.

"I am tickled to death about Milwaukee. I hope that my agent and the Brewers can get something formalized," Hisle told sportswriter Lou Chapman of The Milwaukee Sentinel.

But he said offers from the New York Yankees, California Angels and the Twins were still being considered.

Hisle, picked No. 1 by the Brewers in the re-entry draft, said he also would like to see the Brewers sign Lyman Bostock, his outfield teammate and friend with the Twins. Bostock was the Brewers' No. 2 selection.

Unsolemn Solomon faces loss

LONDON — Fifth-seeded American Harold Solomon blew his cool and a possible $1,350 Tuesday during an explosive 75-minute appearance in the $135,000 Grand Prix tennis championships.

The 25-year-old clay court specialist was beaten, 7-6, 7-6, on two tie-breakers in his first round match against Sweden's Davis Cupper Ove Bengtson and was also reported for five offenses in the process.

Umpire Mike Lugg said he had called Solomon twice for searing, twice for throwing his racket and once for deliberately hitting the ball out of court. Solomon later swore at the umpire in the corridor, said Lugg, and this was also being reported to the representative of the ATP Council.

The offenses on court, plus the later swearing incident, add up in fines totaling $1,350 if upheld by the ATP. Solomon, who withdrew from the doubles saying he was unfit, will end up losing $170 for his work since he receives only $1,180 as a first round loser.

Red Wings pick up two WHA stars

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings Tuesday acquired center Vaclav "Big Ned" Nedomansky and right winger Tim Sheehy from the Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association in the biggest trade ever between hockey's two warring leagues.

The resurgent Red Wings gave up two defensemen they've never used — benchwarmer Steve Durbano and minor leaguer Dave Hanson, now assigned to the Kansas City Wings — plus undisclosed future considerations.

Nedomansky, a Czechoslovakian defector who was the first eastern European to join professional hockey in this country, surpassed the 100-goal plateau early in his third season. Sheehy, picked by the Red Wings in the National Hockey League's 1966 amateur draft, has played in more WHA games than any other player — 408.

Cowboys grope with grid hangover

DALLAS — Losing is apparently harder to take when your team hasn't lost in a while. At least that is the way it seemed Tuesday with Dallas Coach Tom Landry.

"It wasn't a very good night," Landry surmised. "It's hard to shake it off the next morning."

Dallas' 24-17 setback against the St. Louis Cardinals Monday night was the first loss of the season for the Cowboys, who still own a two game division lead.

Air Force Academy kicking specialist Scott Schafer, a former all-conference quarterback from Conant, was voted Offensive Player of the Week last Saturday for his punting display against Army — Tennessee State University football coach John Merritt was given special police protection for the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga game after receiving two threatening telephone calls.

The Houston Astros have signed their number one pick in the free agent draft, former Chicago Cub relief pitcher Oscar Zamora — While former area star Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies was collecting a full $9,661.37 World Series share, another local product, Dave Kingman, picked up just $200 for his stint with the New York Yankees.

Grid contest produces first tie

The Daily Herald's "Pick the Winners" Football Contest is literally all tied up.

For the first time this season, two entries tied as the contest winner.

They were 12-year-old Ray Owens and 32-year-old Edward R. Tomashewski. Both made only two incorrect choices.

Ray's mistakes were choosing New Orleans to beat San Francisco and New York Jets to defeat Seattle.

Ed's miscues included the Seattle-Jet game and Air Force stopping Vanderbilt.

The tie-breaker game was no help, because both correctly picked the final point total (28) for both teams. Incidentally, Slippery Rock and Clarion played to a (you guessed it) 14-14 tie.

Owens, a student at Rand Jr. High School in Arlington Heights, explained he goes with the favorites. "I just take the teams I think will win, usually the favorites," he said.

Ray Owens

Tomashewski cited a number of factors for his success. "I just follow it (football) quite a bit," said this Schaumburg resident who works in the automobile loans department at American National Bank in Chicago. "I get a lot of my information from your reports (The Daily Herald Sports.)"

Ed Tomashewski

Tomashewski mentioned he did not enter the contest until this past week, because there was no high school games to select.

Ed, who won two years ago, said his wife, Ann, helped him with his selections.

The two winners received a free Thermos Kit and are eligible for a free trip for two to the Rose Bowl game, including transportation and hotel accommodations.

That winner will be chosen from the season's 11 weekly winners at a luncheon on Dec. 3.

Last week's college scores were Iowa 24, Wisconsin 8; Yale 24, Harvard 7; Arkansas 26, Texas A & M 20; Missouri 41, Oklahoma State 14; Mississippi 43, Tennessee 14; Minnesota 21, Illinois 0; Air Force 34, Vanderbilt 28; Michigan 40, Purdue 7; and Oklahoma 52, Colorado 14.

Professional scores were Minnesota 42, Cincinnati 14; Pittsburgh 35, Cleveland 31; Denver 17, San Diego 14; Atlanta 17, Detroit 6; Miami 17, New England 5; New York Giants 10, Tampa Bay 0; San Francisco 10, New Orleans 7; Seattle 17, New York Jets 0; Washington 17, Philadelphia 14, and Chicago 28, Kansas City 27.

The tie-breaker game was Slippery Rock 14, Chicago State 14.

Flames Hockey Club pushes for midget tourney

Noting that Chicago does not have a single team in youth hockey to represent the city, Robert Anderson has called for the establishment of a local midget open hockey tournament to halt the hockey drain of young players to Canada.

Anderson is president of the Flames Hockey Club, which has fielded players from Chicago and the suburbs in its four youth divisions since 1973. His players, age 9 through 20, have traveled throughout Europe, Canada and the United States, participating in many tournaments.

Anderson mainly is concerned about players in the Midget category, age 15 and 16, whose next logical move is to the Junior group, whose players are eligible to play hockey up to the age of 20.

HE SAID when Midget players reach their age limit, they usually move to Junior teams in Canada because of the scarcity of good Junior teams in the United States. It is his aim to stop that drain of hockey talent by helping field a strong junior team in the Chicago area.

"The irony is that we have many excellent players in the Chicago area, but there is no central organization or cohesive effort and incentive for them to stay here," Anderson said.

"If we were to hold an annual open hockey tournament for these youngsters at an excellent location like the McFetridge Ice Arena, we would come up with a superior team which could compete against its counterparts from Canada, Scandinavia, the Soviet Union, and other cities in the United States."

Coyote threat faced in L.A. area

Dave Terrill

Just dogs

There aren't any irresponsible dog owners in a number of small communities near Los Angeles, according to the Gaines Dog Research Center. If an owner allows his dog to run free, the dog usually gets killed — by coyotes.

Man's expansion into the rolling foothills has put communities such as La Canada, Pasadena, Glendale, La Crascenta and Burbank in direct competition with packs of coyotes for available space. People in these areas have had numerous encounters with coyotes on the street during the day.

Trash cans, dogs and cats are the primary targets of the hungry predators. The coyote normally preys upon ground squirrels, rabbits and small rodents, but the eating apparently is better in suburbia than in the wilderness.

Sound vaccination program —

With a number of new puppies coming into homes before the Christmas holidays, now is a good time to consider a good vaccination program.

A visit to your veterinarian can help to establish such a program and ensure a healthy pup. There are excellent vaccines available for canine distemper, a highly contagious and often fatal virus disease. Your puppy should receive the first distemper vaccine at 6 to 8 weeks of age and one or two additional vaccines before 4 months of age, followed by annual boosters.

The distemper vaccine contains infectious hepatitis and leptospirosis vaccine to provide immunity against all three contagious diseases.

Illinois dogs are required by law to receive a rabies vaccine after 4 months of age. Continue this vaccine throughout the dog's life.

During your first visit, your veterinarian can make feeding recommendations and outline a health program for your dog. Try to keep the same veterinarian for all your dog's needs so he or she will remain familiar with the dog's case history and will be able to detect physicial and behavioral changes.

Dog clubs and bones —

This has been published before in many magazines and dog club bulletins and is worth repeating because it applies not only to dog clubs, but to many other organizations.

There are three basic kinds of bones that are bad for clubs and only one kind that is good. The bad bones are: the "Wishbones," who spend all their time wishing someone else would get the work done; the "Jawbones," who spend all their time talking instead of working; and the "Knucklebones," who find fault with everything that everyone else tries to do.

The good bones are the "Backbones," who get to work when they see that a job needs doing. What kind of a bone are you?

Bobbie Kostelny found the groove and her Petterson Tire Corp. team is back in contention in the Paddock Classic Women's Traveling League after wallowing in the second division.

Kostelny ignited the defending champions with a blistering 611 series derived from games of 176, 226 and 209. The impetus enabled Petterson to sweep Thunderbird Country Club, 7-0 and forged a third-place hold in the standings. Petterson was a distant sixth last week. Thunderbird relied on Marge Carlson's 539 series.

League-leading L-Tran Engineering may not stop to watch whether Petterson can keep up the pace, however. L-Tran bumped Mason Shoes, 5-2 to increase its cushion to eight points over runnerup Striking Lanes. Isobel Kosi and Marlis Plieckhardt shared honors for the winners with identical 533s. Sally Jo Gerard hit 551-202 for Mason and Sandi Cirullo had 528.

TOWER SURPRISED Striking Lanes, 5-2 as Jan Broderick blasted a 550 and Betty Parkhurst 525-200 to out-distance Lu Schoenberger's 554 and Bette Brelle's 535-207.

Ziebart of Des Plaines topped Ten Pin Bowl, 5-2, on the strength of Elaine Grom's potent 572-215 and Peggy Harris' 551-210 while Ten Pin Bowl countered behind Ethel Juenger's 549-215 and Laverne Kallal's 534.

Formco, Weber's keep tight grip on top ranks

by DON CHRISTENSEN

Formco Metal Products and Weber's Bar-B-Que Kettles shot big at Sim's Bowl and subsequently tightened their grips on first and second place , respectively, in the Paddock Classic Traveling League.

Formco Metal, with members Barry Stjennberg and Fred Hansen blasting totals of 667 and 662, demolished host Sim's Bowl with games of 956, 985 and 967 for 29 of the 32 possible points.

Des Plaines Ace Hardware also fell victim to two excellent individual efforts when Joe Simonis' 665 and Lou Diegel's 626, enabled Weber's Kettles to take all three games and a total of 29 points. Weber's crushed Ace on scores of 992, 994 and 903.

IN A SEESAW battle, Dick McFeely Pontiac edged Beverly Lanes, 19-13, largely because of Mike Tassone's 653 and Bill Palkovics' 639. Beverly Lanes took the first game 993 to 926 as three members rolled 200 or better.

Dick McFeely bounced back with the night's best game, 1044, to Beverly's 907. Mike Tassone's 242 and Eli Johnson and Bill Palkovics' twin 223's paced the onslaught. The last game also went to McFeely Pontiac, 916 to 888, despite Bob Glaser's 232, his last stepping stone to a 648 series.

The Paddock Classic moves to Striker Lanes in Buffalo Grove with these matchups: Weber's Kettles vs. Dick McFeely Pontiac, Formco Metal vs. Beverly Lanes and Des Plaines Ace Hardware vs. Sim's Bowl.

Standings:

Formco Metal 217, Weber's Kettles 200, Des Plaines Ace Hardware 158, Beverly Lanes 133, Dick McFeely Pontiac 127, Sims Bowl 125.

Controversy surrounds IWY parley

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

For the first time in our nation's history, nearly 2,000 delegates — with $5 million in federal funds behind them — will meet at a national women's conference to press for greater equality in all phases of American life.

That gathering is this weekend's national International Women's Year Conference in Houston, and the historic first has been marked with as much controversy as anticipation.

Feminists view the conference as a grass-roots drive to enact needed change and to provide the federal government with a blueprint for women's equality. But a vehement, conservative opposition charges that the national conference and the 56 state and territorial meetings that preceeded it are wastes of taxpayers money and nothing more than a front for radical "women's libbers." Official IWY support of such touchy topics as the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion, and federally funded day care have enraged critics, and a showdown seems imminent in Houston.

THE CONTROVERSIAL national conference got its start in 1975, when the United Nations proclaimed that year International Women's Year and sponsored a conference in Mexico City. More than 1,000 delegates from 133 countries attended, and their major accomplishments included establishment of a World Plan of Action designed to improve the lives of women worldwide.

In the United States, President Ford created a National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year, composed of 35 private citizens and two members from each house of Congress. The commission, directed to "investigate the barriers which prevent women from full participation in the nation's life," submitted a report to the president in July 1976. The report, "To Form a More Perfect Union . . ." included 115 recommendations and served as the backbone for the preliminary state meetings, which along with the national conference were financed by Public Law 94-167 in late 1975.

The commission report was debated, revised, and voted on by nearly 140,000 participants on the state level. A synthesis of that report, original state recommendations and later Commission proposals will be presented at Houston as the National Plan of Action

Opposition to IWY and the conference has centered on several fronts, and its leaders come from such diverse groups as Phyllis Schlafly's right-wing Eagle Forum, the Mormon Church and the Ku Klux Klan. Most opponents agree that the $5 million in IWY funding is another example of irresponsible government spending; that IWY proposals are too dependent on federal funding; and that "pro-family" women are not fairly represented either in the National Commission or in the Houston delegations.

MRS. SCHLAFLY has been at the forefront of the fight against passage of the ERA and the IWY conference. In her August 1977 Phyllis Schlafly Report, "IWY: A Front for Radicals and Lesbians," she charges that "the IWY conferences serve as a front to give media exposure and respectability to radicals, lesbians and misfits who want to agitate for their antifamily goals at the taxpayer's expense.

"The majority of the IWY state conferences were characterized by rigged elections, ruthless parliamentary tactics, and the railroading of pre-scripted IWY resolutions," Mrs. Schlafly wrote. "The arrogant attitude of most IWY officials was . . . if you do not support IWY goals, you have no right to attend."

The conservative, "pro-family" opposition has made more than complaints. In Illinois, 24 "anti-IWY" delegates were elected out of 58 at the IWY state conference in Normal last June. The minority submitted its own final report to Washington, detailing irregularities throughout the two-day conference.

On a national level, the "antis" elected significant numbers in several states, among them Mississippi, which will be represented in Houston by an all-white delegation, including five men. The National Commission has formally denied all challenges to elect state delegates, but conservative North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms has conducted ad hoc hearings on IWY's "fraudulent election and voting procedures" with the intent of prohibiting future conference funding.

The anti-IWY furor hasn't gone unnoticed by feminist leaders, who suspect that extreme right-wing groups have joined forces to discredit the women's movement and increase their influence on other social issues.

They object to the "disruptive tactics" used at the IWY state meetings, and charge that members of such groups as the John Birch Society, Conservative Caucus and Ku Klux Klan have worked together to break up the conference activities.

"THERE'S ABSOLUTELY a right-wing coalition working against IWY," said State Rep. Susan Catania, R-Chicago, the chairwoman of Illinois' IWY Coordinating Committee. "Here in Normal, men were directing groups of women on the floor, and the Mormon Church instructed their women to come.

"Controversy in itself isn't a bad thing at all," she continued. "Like the opposition to the ERA, it forces people to think about the issues. But many of these people come only to disrupt."

But Rosemary Thomson, Illinois director of the Eagle Forum and national director of the IWY Citizens Review Committee, says the right-wing coalition charges are "ridiculous."

"They accuse us of being right-wing extremists because we don't agree with their goals," she said. "I, personally, am a conservative, but there are a lot of liberal Democrats in the Right-to-Life fight.

"It's unrealistic to asume that only pro-ERA women can run a conference . . . and there's no doubt that lesbians have had a great influence as well."

Despite the charges and countercharges, history's first national women's conference will go on as scheduled. Activities for nondelegates — estimates range from 15 to 10,000 — will include a variety of events from the arrival of a cross country torch rally (led by Billie Jean King) to a hearing on the impact of nuclear and strategic arms.

There will be a day-long women's film festival, training sessions on shelters for battered wives and women in politics, and talks by prominent women in government.

JOINING WOMEN who have never before attended a conference will be such celebrities as First Lady Rosalynn Carter, Former First Lady Betty Ford, Coretta Scott King, Gloria Steinem and actress Jean Stapleton.

IWY supporters are confident their National Plan of Action will emerge from the fracas as a positive guideline for women's rights; opponents hope to draw media attention to their complaints, even if their small numbers (estimated at between 300 and 400 elected delegates) preclude victory.

According to State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, a member of the Illinois coordinating committee and a delegate, it is a mistake for either opponents or proponents to consider the conference "a black and white, open and shut issue."

"I anticipate a lot of diversity, because there are a lot of very different proposals here," Mrs. Chapman said. "One thing's for sure . . . it will be an interesting weekend."

Editor's note: Houston, Tex., will welcome more than 15,000 visitors this weekend as delegates and observers meet for the International Women's Year Conference, a gathering designed to present Congress and President Carter with recommendations to further women's equality.

Daily Herald staff writer Laura Schmalbach will be in Houston to report on the three-day conference. In addition to her Houston reports, Schmalbach today begins a three-part series examining the background of IWY, the viewpoints of Northwest suburban delegates and interviews with three prominent IWY members from Illinois.

Schmanlbach, who also covered the state IWY Conference in Normal last June, has been with the Daily Herald since 1976. She worked as a municipal reporter before moving to her current position on the Suburban Living staff.

Focus to be on National Plan of Action for ERA

The major focus of the upcoming National Women's Conference will be the National Plan of Action, a 38-page report calling for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and outlining more than 100 proposals to end discrimination against women.

The proposed plan, which will be debated and voted on by nearly 2,000 delegates in Houston this weekend, contains recommendations approved at a majority of the 56 state and territorial meetings conducted earlier this year. Other proposals include those voted on by 10 or more state meetings, as well as recommendations made by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year last month.

Following approval by the conference delegates the plan will be presented to Congress and to President Carter. The President is required to give Congress his recommendations for action by March 1978.

The plan includes proposals on 26 issues of concern to women. Among the most controversial recommendations are support of ERA ratification; federal funding of comprehensive, voluntary child care and developmental programs; support of abortion and its continued funding under Medicaid and other government programs; and establishment of a cabinet-level Women's Dept. to coordinate existing women's programs.

Other issues and proposals include:

• Arts and humanities. Support of women's equal treatment in employment and federally funded cultural institutions, in awarding of federal grants and in representation on boards and commissions.

• Battered women. Establishment of a national clearinghouse on domestic violence, training programs at local and state levels, state funding and support of shelters for battered wives and their children.

• Business. More assistance to women entrepreneurs as small business owners, including women's eligibility in the Small Business Administration under "socially or economically disadvantaged groups."

• Child abuse. Establishment or continuation of state child abuse prevention, reporting, counseling and intervention programs.

• Credit. Strong enforcement of the Federal Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1974; a national educational campaign by the Federal Reserve Board.

• Disabled women. Full federal enforcement of existing laws prohibiting discrimination and requiring special facilities for the disabled, extension of Medicare and Medicaid coverage to disabled women.

• Education. Stepped-up enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Surveys by the federal government and Civil Rights Commission on compliance with antidiscrimination laws. Elimination of sex-stereotyping in state school systems via review of books and curriculum, preservice and inservice training of teachers and administrators, and nonsexist counseling.

• Elective and appointive office. Increase in appointment of women as judges at every level. Equal membership of men and women serving on state boards and commissions by 1985. Women's greater participation in all political party activities, including public office, and establishment of women's affirmative action offices in national political parties.

• Employment. Eighteen specific recommendations, the largest number on any issue. Support for affirmative action programs, a federal policy of full employment, federal legislation to provide equal pay for work of equal value, and guarantees of pregnancy disability benefits. Amendment of Veteran Preference Act of 1944 so that veterans preference is used on one-time-only basis and within a three-year period after discharge, except for disabled veterans.

• Health. Establishment of a national health security program that covers the health needs of women as individuals. Expansion of the Food and Drug Administration to protect women from hazardous, unsafe or ineffective drugs and cosmetics. Federal funding of contraceptive research and community-based reproductive health services. Investigation of nursing home and mental institution conditions.

• Homemakers. Revision of federal and state laws regarding marital property, inheritance and domestic relations laws to recognize each spouse's equal contribution. Support of Social Security for homemakers and federal and state programs for displaced homemaker. Recognition that minor children's needs must be met first in a divorce, and that spouses should share the economic dislocation.

• Insurance. Elimination of discrimination against women in insurance, including the present exclusion of conditions related to pregnancy.

• International affairs. Inclusion of more women in all aspects of U.S. Foreign Policy. Increased educational efforts directed at women's contributions in other countries. U.S. initiative in urging all nuclear powers to start phasing out nuclear arsenals. Reduced military spending.

• Media. Improvement of women's image and employment in the communications industry.

• Minority women. Specific proposals for minority women in all programs designed to assist women. Increased billingual programs and services.

• Offenders. Equal treatment of male and female juvenile offenders. Increased state efforts to divert women offenders to community-based treatment facilities. Nonsexist vocational and educational training, and equality in facilities at men's and women's prisons.

• Older women. Increased social and health services for elderly women. Liberalized Medical provisions in the Social Security Act. Elimination of mandatory retirement.

• Rape. Reform of criminal codes and case law dealing with rape and related offenses. Establishment of local rape task forces and rape crisis centers, as well as increased educational programs. Expansion of existing compensation for rape victims.

• Rural women. Increased federal efforts to meet the special problems of rural women, including recognition of farm wives' crucial contributions to farm operations.

• Sexual preference. Elimination of discrimination on the basis of sexual preference. Evaluation of child custody cases without regard to the parent's sexual orientation.

• Statistics. Increased efforts to identify women and minorities in federal statistics.

• Welfare. Federal expansion of employment opportunities, continuing career education and practical job training to poor women, in an effort to assist heads of families on AFDC. Establishment of a minimum guaranteed income.

Contact agency for help in finding natural parents

Julie Martoccio

Women and children first

For Kathy: Your feelings express the emotions of many adoptees who have waited seven or more years to find their roots. To have the adoption agency invite you there and then see the social worker sit in front of you with your files is understandably frustrating when she would not let you examine them.

In a recent article in Family Law Quarterly, the author makes some significant comments and suggestions about the adoptive predicament. Only two states, Alabama and Kansas now permit adoptees to have access to his or her birth certificate without a court order. Virginia is the only state which permits access to court records. "It is ironic," the author points out, "that no state statutes restrict access to agency records since most of the information of interest to the adoptee would most likely be collected there."

He also points out in the article that in spite of the Child Welfare League of America's Standards for Adoption Services that "recommend only limited information to be given about biological parents and discourage descriptive data," that adoption agencies have gone beyond their recommendations to include much more information.

The author states that there is a need for reform and suggests (among other things) that the agencies "should accept as part of their service the function of counselor to the adoptee, the adoptive parents and the biological parents with regard to any problem arising out of the adoption." In this context, he adds, "it may be desirable for agencies to mediate requests by adoptees or biological parents or both for information or reunion."

What he is driving at, is what I, personally, have felt about the question of adoption information for a long time. That it need not be an adversary proceeding. In fact, it would save time and expense to settle the whole question outside of a court room.

SINCE THE SITUATION is not clarified either by court decision or adoption agency procedure, you may well understand why a lawyer would tell you how expensive a suit would be.

My suggestion is that, even though you contacted or worked with a volunteer organization, you get in touch with Yesterday's Children, Box 1554, Evanston, Ill. Organizations of this type have more time and interest to track down necessary information, check on the latest court decisions and the law than a lawyer who will probably have a case like yours once in 10 years, if ever. It's even possible that Yesterday's Children may have a lawyer or two as members able to answer your questions more precisely.

Recently, the organization began a computerized service to match up adoptees and natural parents seeking each other. Again, this is an example of how an interested group of people can work toward making costly, long drawn out lawsuits unnecessary.

(Readers are invited to submit questions regarding problems of women and children. Names and facts that would identify the writer are withheld on request, but no personal responses will be sent through the mail. Attorney Martoccio's legal information is to inform and not advise. "They accuse us of being right-wing extremists because we don't agree with their goals," she said. "I, personally, am a conservative, but there are a lot of liberal Democrats in the Right-to-Life fight.

"It's unrealistic to asume that only pro-ERA women can run a conference . . . and there's no doubt that lesbians have had a great influence as well."

Despite the charges and countercharges, history's first national women's conference will go on as scheduled. Activities for nondelegates — estimates range from 15 to 10,000 — will include a variety of events from the arrival of a cross country torch rally (led by Billie Jean King) to a hearing on the impact of nuclear and strategic arms.

There will be a day-long women's film festival, training sessions on shelters for battered wives and women in politics, and talks by prominent women in government.

JOINING WOMEN who have never before attended a conference will be such celebrities as First Lady Rosalynn Carter, Former First Lady Betty Ford, Coretta Scott King, Gloria Steinem and actress Jean Stapleton.

IWY supporters are confident their National Plan of Action will emerge from the fracas as a positive guideline for women's rights; opponents hope to draw media attention to their complaints, even if their small numbers (estimated at between 300 and 400 elected delegates) preclude victory.

According to State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, a member of the Illinois coordinating committee and a delegate, it is a mistake for either opponents or proponents to consider the conference "a black and white, open and shut issue."

"I anticipate a lot of diversity, because there are a lot of very different proposals here," Mrs. Chapman said. "One thing's for sure . . . it will be an interesting weekend."

Editor's note: Houston, Tex., will welcome more than 15,000 visitors this weekend as delegates and observers meet for the International Women's Year Conference, a gathering designed to present Congress and President Carter with recommendations to further women's equality.

Daily Herald staff writer Laura Schmalbach will be in Houston to report on the three-day conference. In addition to her Houston reports, Schmalbach today begins a three-part series examining the background of IWY, the viewpoints of Northwest suburban delegates and interviews with three prominent IWY members from Illinois.

Schmanlbach, who also covered the state IWY Conference in Normal last June, has been with the Daily Herald since 1976. She worked as a municipal reporter before moving to her current position on the Suburban Living staff.

Focus to be on National Plan of Action for ERA

The major focus of the upcoming National Women's Conference will be the National Plan of Action, a 38-page report calling for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and outlining more than 100 proposals to end discrimination against women.

The proposed plan, which will be debated and voted on by nearly 2,000 delegates in Houston this weekend, contains recommendations approved at a majority of the 56 state and territorial meetings conducted earlier this year. Other proposals include those voted on by 10 or more state meetings, as well as recommendations made by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year last month.

Following approval by the conference delegates the plan will be presented to Congress and to President Carter. The President is required to give Congress his recommendations for action by March 1978.

The plan includes proposals on 26 issues of concern to women. Among the most controversial recommendations are support of ERA ratification; federal funding of comprehensive, voluntary child care and developmental programs; support of abortion and its continued funding under Medicaid and other government programs; and establishment of a cabinet-level Women's Dept. to coordinate existing women's programs.

Other issues and proposals include:

• Arts and humanities. Support of women's equal treatment in employment and federally funded cultural institutions, in awarding of federal grants and in representation on boards and commissions.

• Battered women. Establishment of a national clearinghouse on domestic violence, training programs at local and state levels, state funding and support of shelters for battered wives and their children.

• Business. More assistance to women entrepreneurs as small business owners, including women's eligibility in the Small Business Administration under "socially or economically disadvantaged groups."

• Child abuse. Establishment or continuation of state child abuse prevention, reporting, counseling and intervention programs.

• Credit. Strong enforcement of the Federal Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1974; a national educational campaign by the Federal Reserve Board.

• Disabled women. Full federal enforcement of existing laws prohibiting discrimination and requiring special facilities for the disabled, extension of Medicare and Medicaid coverage to disabled women.

• Education. Stepped-up enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Surveys by the federal government and Civil Rights Commission on compliance with antidiscrimination laws. Elimination of sex-stereotyping in state school systems via review of books and curriculum, preservice and inservice training of teachers and administrators, and nonsexist counseling.

• Elective and appointive office. Increase in appointment of women as judges at every level. Equal membership of men and women serving on state boards and commissions by 1985. Women's greater participation in all political party activities, including public office, and establishment of women's affirmative action offices in national political parties.

• Employment. Eighteen specific recommendations, the largest number on any issue. Support for affirmative action programs, a federal policy of full employment, federal legislation to provide equal pay for work of equal value, and guarantees of pregnancy disability benefits. Amendment of Veteran Preference Act of 1944 so that veterans preference is used on one-time-only basis and within a three-year period after discharge, except for disabled veterans.

• Health. Establishment of a national health security program that covers the health needs of women as individuals. Expansion of the Food and Drug Administration to protect women from hazardous, unsafe or ineffective drugs and cosmetics. Federal funding of contraceptive research and community-based reproductive health services. Investigation of nursing home and mental institution conditions.

• Homemakers. Revision of federal and state laws regarding marital property, inheritance and domestic relations laws to recognize each spouse's equal contribution. Support of Social Security for homemakers and federal and state programs for displaced homemaker. Recognition that minor children's needs must be met first in a divorce, and that spouses should share the economic dislocation.

• Insurance. Elimination of discrimination against women in insurance, including the present exclusion of conditions related to pregnancy.

• International affairs. Inclusion of more women in all aspects of U.S. Foreign Policy. Increased educational efforts directed at women's contributions in other countries. U.S. initiative in urging all nuclear powers to start phasing out nuclear arsenals. Reduced military spending.

• Media. Improvement of women's image and employment in the communications industry.

• Minority women. Specific proposals for minority women in all programs designed to assist women. Increased billingual programs and services.

• Offenders. Equal treatment of male and female juvenile offenders. Increased state efforts to divert women offenders to community-based treatment facilities. Nonsexist vocational and educational training, and equality in facilities at men's and women's prisons.

• Older women. Increased social and health services for elderly women. Liberalized Medical provisions in the Social Security Act. Elimination of mandatory retirement.

• Rape. Reform of criminal codes and case law dealing with rape and related offenses. Establishment of local rape task forces and rape crisis centers, as well as increased educational programs. Expansion of existing compensation for rape victims.

• Rural women. Increased federal efforts to meet the special problems of rural women, including recognition of farm wives' crucial contributions to farm operations.

• Sexual preference. Elimination of discrimination on the basis of sexual preference. Evaluation of child custody cases without regard to the parent's sexual orientation.

• Statistics. Increased efforts to identify women and minorities in federal statistics.

• Welfare. Federal expansion of employment opportunities, continuing career education and practical job training to poor women, in an effort to assist heads of families on AFDC. Establishment of a minimum guaranteed income.

Contact agency for help in finding natural parents

Julie Martoccio

Women and children first

For Kathy: Your feelings express the emotions of many adoptees who have waited seven or more years to find their roots. To have the adoption agency invite you there and then see the social worker sit in front of you with your files is understandably frustrating when she would not let you examine them.

In a recent article in Family Law Quarterly, the author makes some significant comments and suggestions about the adoptive predicament. Only two states, Alabama and Kansas now permit adoptees to have access to his or her birth certificate without a court order. Virginia is the only state which permits access to court records. "It is ironic," the author points out, "that no state statutes restrict access to agency records since most of the information of interest to the adoptee would most likely be collected there."

He also points out in the article that in spite of the Child Welfare League of America's Standards for Adoption Services that "recommend only limited information to be given about biological parents and discourage descriptive data," that adoption agencies have gone beyond their recommendations to include much more information.

The author states that there is a need for reform and suggests (among other things) that the agencies "should accept as part of their service the function of counselor to the adoptee, the adoptive parents and the biological parents with regard to any problem arising out of the adoption."

In this context, he adds, "it may be desirable for agencies to mediate requests by adoptees or biological parents or both for information or reunion."

What he is driving at, is what I, personally, have felt about the question of adoption information for a long time. That it need not be an adversary proceeding. In fact, it would save time and expense to settle the whole question outside of a court room.

SINCE THE SITUATION is not clarified either by court decision or adoption agency procedure, you may well understand why a lawyer would tell you how expensive a suit would be.

My suggestion is that, even though you contacted or worked with a volunteer organization, you get in touch with Yesterday's Children, Box 1554, Evanston, Ill. Organizations of this type have more time and interest to track down necessary information, check on the latest court decisions and the law than a lawyer who will probably have a case like yours once in 10 years, if ever. It's even possible that Yesterday's Children may have a lawyer or two as members able to answer your questions more precisely.

Recently, the organization began a computerized service to match up adoptees and natural parents seeking each other. Again, this is an example of how an interested group of people can work toward making costly, long drawn out lawsuits unnecessary.

The doctor says

Many causes for heart palpitations

I am 73 and with the exception of arthritis, am in good health. The other thing is a few yers ago I began experiencing episodes of rapid heart beats. Usually these come on at night. I awaken with a sensation of laborious beats which go into palpitations and finally become so rapid I wonder how my heart can take them. My doctor tells me he can find nothing wrong with my heart. He prescribed Butisol which seems to work all right, but the palpitations have to run their course, lasting probably three to five minutes. These attacks are infrequent, but occur every three to four months.

Some people do have attacks of rapid heart action and do not have any heart disease. You would be unusual at your age not to have some changes in your arteries, but any change you have may not be related to your attacks.

Palpitations or extra beats often precede an attack of rapid heart action. The irritable spot in the heart that causes the attacks first causes extra beats or palpitation, then the spot takes over the electrical action of the heart and may cause the episode.

These may be of short duration as in your case, or they may be more sustained. Some require medical treatment, and others stop spontaneously as if nothing had happened.

It makes some difference where the spot in the heart is located that starts the palpitation and the attack of rapid beats. The only way to tell is by obtaining an electrocardiogram during the attack and with infrequent attacks such as you have this is often almost impossible.

Almost everyone has some palpitations at times or what people describe as the heart skipping a beat, but a much smaller number actually have attacks of rapid heart action.

The Butisol is a sedative and helps you tolerate the short attack better. There are medicines that can be used to control the attacks if they become more severe or frequent and are needed.

Special to readers: In my column of September 27 I referred to the drug cimetidine (Tagmet) as not being available for prescriptions in the United States. However, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the drug in an unusually short period of time.

Dr. Marion Finkel of the FDA stated that it usually takes 22 months for approval of a new drug. But, "good foreign data allowed the drug to be available here earlier than usual," she said. Hence, Tagmet is now available to the public as a prescription item. The primary use of this drug is in the treatment of peptic ulcers.

Cornbread, sausage stuffing a favorite

Dear Roberta: We're reversing a custom of a few years by having my in-laws for dinner at our house this Thanksgiving. What I need most is a well-tested recipe for turkey stuffing. —Barbara Flick

For more years than I can remember, I've been making a cornbread and sausage stuffing. This modernized version of an old Southern recipe is more of a Thanksgiving tradition at our house than the pumpkin pies, which differ from year to year. In a very large bowl prepare two 8-ounce packages of cornbread stuffing and one package of regular seasoned stuffing. For this stage follow package directions, using two cups water, two chicken bouillon cubes and one-half pound butter. In a skillet cook to the desired degree of doneness one-half cup each of chopped green pepper and chopped celery and three-quarters cup chopped onion in a half-stick of butter. Put vegetables in the mixing bowl. In the same skillet brown a pound of sausage meat cut into inch cubes. In the meantime, beat two eggs, and mix into other ingredients in the bowl, along with one teaspoon marjoram and one-quarter teaspoon pepper. Combine all with drained sausage and stuff turkey. This makes plenty for a 20-pound bird.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Ipczy

Laurie Kay Laughlin – Michael Ipczy

An afternoon wedding Oct. 22 in Prospect Heights Community Church united Laurie Kay Laughlin of Prospect Heights and Michael Ipczy of Mount Prospect. They met four years ago while in high school, Laurie graduating in 1974 from Hersey High and Michael in 1973 from Prospect High.

Parents of the couple are the Roger H. Laughlins, Prospect Heights, and the Andrew Ipczys, Northfield.

The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with narrow Venetian lace bands and her chapel-length veil was held by a Juliet cap also edged in lace. White roses, carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath were in her bouquet, which she carried with a white Bible, one her mother had carried on her wedding day.

MRS. LAUGHLIN made Laurie's gown and veil and also the ensembles of her attendants. Their gowns were of peach polyester crepe topped by hooded robes in the same fabric and accented with embroidered panels. The four attendants carried brown pompons, peach carnations, white roses and baby's breath.

Jamie Laughlin, the bride's sister-in-law from Carpentersville, was matron of honor. Paula Johnson, Prospect Heights, served as maid of honor and the groom's sisters, Linda, Denver, as bridesmaid and Lisa, Northfield, as junior bridesmaid.

Michael chose Robert Miltzow, Mount Prospect, as best man and Rick Ford, Arlington Heights, and Ken Laughlin, brother of the bride, as groomsmen.

Dinner and dancing followed for 150 guests at Camelot Restaurant, Des Plaines. After a week's honeymoon in Los Angeles, the newlyweds are living in Rolling Meadows. Laurie works for Addressgraph-Multigraphics Corp., Schaumburg, and Michael for Haskris Co., Elk Grove.

Should lay hypnotists be banned?

by KAREN SOUTHWICK

PITTSBURGH — Lay hypnotists across the nation offer simplistic mind-over-matter solutions to pain, nerves and obesity all too attractive to the desperate and uninformed.

Ralph Grossi, a nationally known Pittsburgh hypnotist whose methods have stirred controversy, promises to help people lose weight, stop smoking and eliminate bad habits in four short visits. He also says he helps some regress to a previous life.

"I've hypnotized 100,000," Grossi boasts. "Ninety per cent lose over 10 pounds the first week."

HYPNOSIS, HE explains, reinforces a conscious desire with the subconscious. His subjects testify the method works. Professional psychologists say the bad habit may be eliminated, but the attitudes that led to it remain.

Grossi learned hypnosis from a World War II army buddy, and has since added a "doctor of psychology" degree through a correspondence course from Neotarian College of Kansas City, Mo., a nonaccredited institution.

Despite a lack of medical training, Grossi has built a lucrative practice in hypnosis clinics in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. He charges $59 for four visits — nonrefundable and payable at the first visit. The charge to be "age-regressed" to a previous life is $75.

The national and local societies of clinical hypnotists — health professionals with an M.D., DDS, or Ph.D. in psychology — assail Grossi for his nonmedical background and his grandiose promises.

"He's a con man out for a buck," said Dr. Russell Scott, president of the Western Pennsylvania Society of Clinical Hypnosis. "The man is a charlatan preying upon people who can least afford to be victimized.

"I would never make a referral to Grossi. The position of the American Medical Assn. and the American Psychiatric Assn. is that under no circumstances should any professional make a referral to a lay hypnotist."

DR. KAY THOMPSON, who is the immediate past president of the American Society of Clinical Hypnosis, noted the United States is one of only three nations that does not restrict hypnosis to the health fields.

She estimated there are 4,000 lay hypnotists nationwide — about half in California and 400 in Pennsylvania.

The society "would like to see hypnosis limited to those people trained professionally in the healing arts. Stage hypnosis — and the kind of stuff Grossi does — would be ruled out," Scott said.

Lay hypnotists "are not qualified to do the vast majority of things Grossi says he does," Scott said, but they're organized into a union affiliated with the AFL-CIO so "it's very difficult to deal with."

"Hypnosis is the only tool Grossi has," Thompson said. "He's not qualified to recognize or treat any related symptoms of obesity.

"Anybody can be a hypnotist," she said. "If you have a good subject you are a good hypnotist."

GROSSI ADMITS he only motivates people "to do what they already want to do."

But he dismissed the charges of Thompson and Scott as jealousy "because I am so successful.

"I am a hypnotherapist rather than just a psychologist," he said.

"I do therapy but not as a psychiatrist would do it. You say, 'I am nervous.' I say to you, "You are not going to be nervous.' "

Grossi said he has regressed 6,000 persons to a previous life, including some on national television.

He regressed Donna Panzo, a Charleroi, Pa., housewife who described herself as a Bulgarian in the 19th Century and spoke her language.

However, Nick Jordanoff, who spoke Bulgarian as his first language, said of what she was saying, "It's not any language I've ever heard. I think it's just nonsense words that maybe to her sound foreign."

Today on TV

Diane Mermigas

O'Connor shines as big city boss

The man who has made Archie Bunker an American classic fervently portrays a boss of a deteriorating big city in "The Last Hurrah."

Carroll O'Connor and his production company have created the television adaptation of Edwin O'Connor's 1956 bestseller in the fashion of an old-time television drama that is suitable fare for the Hallmark Hall of Fame Showcase at 7 p.m. today on Channel 5.

Viewers are introduced to the fictitious Boston Mayor Frank Skeffington as his 12-year career as a big city boss takes a downward turn although he has announced his plans to run for re-election to a fourth term.

HAD WE BEEN INVITED to look in on this flamboyant politician 10 years earlier, it might be more difficult to empathize with his situation.

The patronage and payoffs, the rule with an iron fist and manipulative leadership that distinguishes Skeffington's reign is characteristic of at least one big city machine.

But, Skeffington, as the 53-year-old O'Connor portrays him, gropes to reconcile his personal affairs and win a clean, honest fight at the polls in what he knows to be the twilight of his life.

Old friends he has long since forgotten denounce him in public, the city's long-time Catholic cardinal opposes him because of the unorthodox love affair the widower has carried on with a journalist played with spunk and spite by Mariette Hartley, and Skeffington's arch enemy, a wealthy banker, pulls the rug of financial stability from beneath him.

ALTHOUGH HE LOSES the battle to maintain his seat of authority, Skeffington emerges the victor in a more worthwhile, lasting endeavor.

Before dying from a heart ailment that he has long kept secret, the elder statesman comes to terms with his estranged son who is bitter over his father's absence during his childhood and his parents' split before his mother's death.

It is sad that the attorney-son, Robert, played by Patrick Wayne, only comes to appreciate the charming, sentimental nature of his father in the final hours of the old man's life. But, the son pledges to carry on his father's work and inherit the political empire, ending the show on a note of teary-eyed hope.

Perhaps the character of Robert Skeffington is meant to be subdued by the overpowering ways of his father, but the performance of actor John Wayne's son in that part is weak and uninspiring.

THE TONE OF THE story and the theatrical characterization that O'Connor brings to what might have otherwise been a superficial, plastic portrayal is what makes "The Last Hurrah" worth watching.

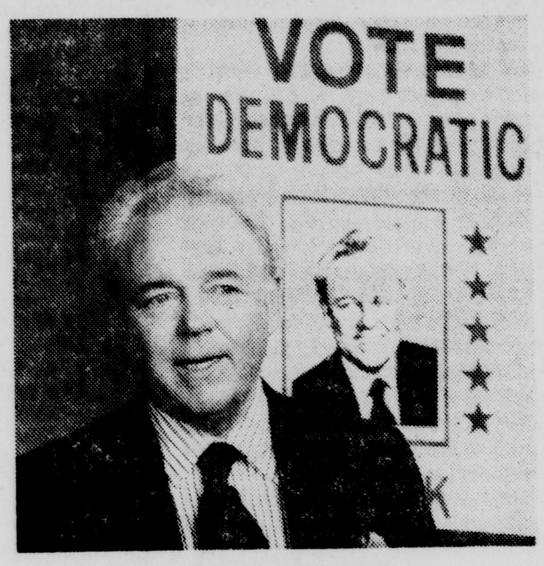
O'Connor admits having drawn from the manner of charismatic big city bosses like the late Richard J. Daley for his own version of Skeffington. He has generally left his character of Archie behind in the role, although there are occasional glimpses of the bigoted blue-collar breadwinner in O'Connor's gesture and speech.

"Edwin O'Connor wrote his book about the last campaign of a politician who he felt was a dying breed. I took the opposite point of view with the story because I feel that as long as we have an urban democratic system, there will always be big city bosses like Skeffington," O'Connor said.



CARROLL O'CONNOR
IN "THE LAST HURRAH"

THERE ARE OTHER more subtle changes that O'Connor has made that contrast with the book and the corresponding 1958 movie that starred Spencer Tracy in the main role.

The project just happened to fall into his production company's lap and was not a calculated move by O'Connor to prepare the public for accepting him in roles other than that of Archie in "All in the Family," which is in its eighth and final season.

"I don't mind being best known for playing Archie, I'm proud of it. He comes right out of the mainstream of American life. Everybody knows who he is and everybody identifies with him in one way or another," O'Connor said.

The actor's production company is developing two situation comedies for CBS and he is contracted to develop and star in a one-hour dramatic serial for the network once his commitment to "All in the Family" has ended.

O'Connor is an intelligent, warm, inventive actor whose predominantly Irish upbringing and theatrical background shines through in "The Last Hurrah," his first dramatic television special in seven years.

If the show is any indication of the kind of fine art that O'Connor and his production company can bring to television, his future efforts are anxiously awaited.

TV NOTES:

NBC has announced the cancellation of "Rosetti and Ryan," "Oregon Trail," "Big Hawaii" and "Mulligan Stew." It's no surprise considering the low ratings the shows have consistently claimed.

"Oregon Trail" will be replaced at 8 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Dec. 14 by "The Black Sheep Squadron," a new title for Robert Conrad's "Baa Baa Black Sheep" series of last season. "What Really Happned to the Class of '65" moves into the 9 p.m. Thursday slot vacated by "Rosetti and Ryan" beginning Dec. 8. "Mulligan Stew" will be replaced early in January by "event programming" and "Police Woman" moves to 9 p.m. Wednesdays at that time.

Christmas comes early to Cash in Jerusalem

by RICHARD C. GROSS

JERUSALEM — Christmas will come early for craggy faced singer Johnny Cash. It will be a very personal one that nevertheless will be telecast coast-to-coast in the United States.

Cash and his singer wife, June Carter, led an entourage of 21 persons to the Holy Land for 10 days of shooting background scenes in Bethlehem and the Galilee region. Their Christmas special will be aired on CBS-TV Nov. 30.

Between takes, Cash visited 15 minutes with Prime Minister Menahem Begin. A spokesman who was present said Cash couldn't get a word in edgewise. He also visited an orphanage where he sang to the children.

"I feel as good as a gentile can feel in the city of Jerusalem," Cash said over dinner at an Arab-owned hotel in Israeli-annexed East Jerusalem. The anciet walled city of Jerusalem, bathed in orange spotlights, glowed through the window behind him.

MUCH OF THE singing for the Christmas special is being done at the Grand Ole Opryhouse in Nashville, Tenn., the American capital of country and western music. Backdrop for the songs will be the films of Bethlehem, where Jesus Christ was born, and of the Sea of Galilee, where Christ is said to have walked on water.

"I wanted to do a Christmas special with my friends and Nashville seemed like the place to do it," said Cash, born to cotton farmers in Highlands, Ark. He now lives near Nashville and winters in Jamaica, where he owns a 17th century home.

The friends singing with the Cashes are stars of country and western music such as Roy Clark, Jerry Lee Lewis, Roy Orbison, Carl Perkins and the Statler Brothers.

The songs will be a mixture of Christmas carols and a bit of Americana, including Gene Autry's "Back in the Saddle."

There will be one in memory of Elvis Presley: "This Train Is Bound for Glory."

CASH WILL RECALL his first trips to the Holy Land in 1968 and 1971. On the second visit, he made a movie, "Gospel Road," that was bought by 20th Century Fox and sold to World Wide Pictures of Burbank, Calif., part of evangelist Billy Graham's organization.

The film now is in distribution in 500 churches throughout America.

Cash is not an evangelist, despite his strong religious feelings and faith in his Protestantism that pulled him through the worst period of his life, a time when he was lost in a foggy world of alcohol, barbiturates and amphetamines. Now he drinks iced tea in public.

He spent a year making "Gospel Road," a project he seems to view as having repaid a debt to his religion for getting him through the worst times.

JOHNNY CASH is in the Holy Land for the shooting of background scenes for a Christmas television special to be aired Nov. 30.

"I would like to be remembered for it," Cash said of the film, as if it should be his epitaph. "I can't call what I do evangelism, except for 'Gospel Road,' and then only after it was taken out of my hands."

HE DEFENDED Billy Graham against charges in the United States that money donated to his organiation has been used for Graham's personal gain.

"There's a lot of injustice in the criticism leveled against him," Cash said. "He's on a very small salary and wears $89 suits. This man is not a money man. Money is not what this man is about. The gospel is what this man is all about."

Cash, 45, looks older despite the lack of gray in his dark hair. The age is in his brown eyes, on his lined face. The sensitivity he projects in his songs, many of which he wrote, comes through in conversation. It belies the tough, truck driver image he assumes by wearing all black.

The deep voice for which he is renowned is the same in conversation as it is in song.

HE IS SOFT-SPOKEN. Dealing with strangers, he is as gracious as an aristocrat. He has a knack for remembering names.

His sensitivity is reflected in his impression of a visit to Masada. That ancient mountaintop fortress overlooks the Dead Sea where a handful of Jews held off the Roman army for three years, until they committed suicide rather than be conquered.

"Masada was the most stirring, inspiring thing I've ever seen," Cash said.

Once the Christmas special is finished, he will begin work on a television film, "Thaddeus Rose and Eddy," a story about seeking directions in life set mostly in Texas. Dennis Weaver may play Eddy.

"But," Cash said, "I think of myself as a performer and a writer, not an actor."

O'Connor shines as big city boss

The man who has made Archie Bunker an American classic fervently portrays a boss of a deteriorating big city in "The Last Hurrah."

Carroll O'Connor and his production company have created the television adaptation of Edwin O'Connor's 1956 bestseller in the fashion of an old-time television drama that is suitable fare for the Hallmark Hall of Fame Showcase at 7 p.m. today on Channel 5.

Viewers are introduced to the fictitious Boston Mayor Frank Skeffington as his 12-year career as a big city boss takes a downward turn although he has announced his plans to run for re-election to a fourth term.

HAD WE BEEN INVITED to look in on this flamboyant politician 10 years earlier, it might be more difficult to empathize with his situation.

The patronage and payoffs, the rule with an iron fist and manipulative leadership that distinguishes Skeffington's reign is characteristic of at least one big city machine.

But, Skeffington, as the 53-year-old O'Connor portrays him, gropes to reconcile his personal affairs and win a clean, honest fight at the polls in what he knows to be the twilight of his life.

Old friends he has long since forgotten denounce him in public, the city's long-time Catholic cardinal opposes him because of the unorthodox love affair the widower has carried on with a journalist played with spunk and spite by Mariette Hartley, and Skeffington's arch enemy, a wealthy banker, pulls the rug of financial stability from beneath him.

ALTHOUGH HE LOSES the battle to maintain his seat of authority, Skeffington emerges the victor in a more worthwhile, lasting endeavor.

Before dying from a heart ailment that he has long kept secret, the elder statesman comes to terms with his estranged son who is bitter over his father's absence during his childhood and his parents' split before his mother's death.

It is sad that the attorney-son, Robert, played by Patrick Wayne, only comes to appreciate the charming, sentimental nature of his father in the final hours of the old man's life. But, the son pledges to carry on his father's work and inherit the political empire, ending the show on a note of teary-eyed hope.

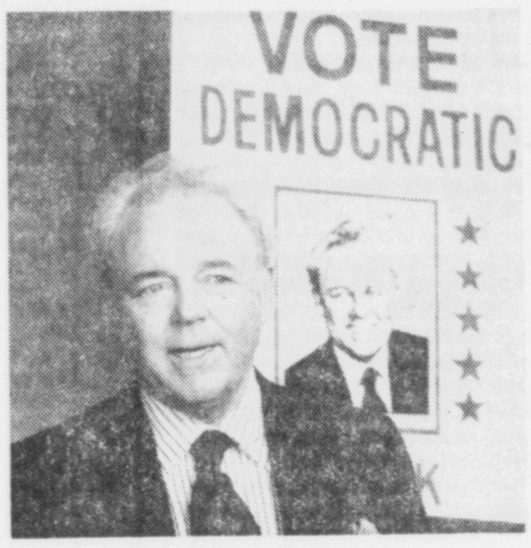
Perhaps the character of Robert Skeffington is meant to be subdued by the overpowering ways of his father, but the performance of actor John Wayne's son in that part is weak and uninspiring.

THE TONE OF THE story and the theatrical characterization that O'Connor brings to what might have otherwise been a superficial, plastic portrayal is what makes "The Last Hurrah" worth watching.

The production marks O'Connor's debut as a teleplay writer and he shares the title of executive producer of the show with his partner, Terry Becker, of O'Connor-Becker Productions.

O'Connor admits having drawn from the manner of charismatic big city bosses like the late Richard J. Daley for his own version of Skeffington. He has generally left his character of Archie behind in the role, although there are occasional glimpses of the bigoted blue-collar breadwinner in O'Connor's gesture and speech.

"Edwin O'Connor wrote his book about the last campaign of a politician who he felt was a dying breed. I took the opposite point of view with the story because I feel that as long as we have an urban democratic system, there will always be big city bosses like Skeffington," O'Connor said.



CARROLL O'CONNOR
IN "THE LAST HURRAH"

THERE ARE OTHER more subtle changes that O'Connor has made that contrast with the book and the corresponding 1958 movie that starred Spencer Tracy in the main role.

The project just happened to fall into his production company's lap and was not a calculated move by O'Connor to prepare the public for accepting him in roles other than that of Archie in "All in the Family," which is in its eighth and final season.

"I don't mind being best known for playing Archie, I'm proud of it. He comes right out of the mainstream of American life. Everybody knows who he is and everybody identifies with him in one way or another," O'Connor said.

The actor's production company is developing two situation comedies for CBS and he is contracted to develop and star in a one-hour dramatic serial for the network once his commitment to "All in the Family" has ended.

O'Connor is an intelligent, warm, inventive actor whose predominantly Irish upbringing and theatrical background shines through in "The Last Hurrah," his first dramatic television special in seven years.

If the show is any indication of the kind of fine art that O'Connor and his production company can bring to television, his future efforts are anxiously awaited.

TV NOTES:

NBC has announced the cancellation of "Rosetti and Ryan," "Oregon Trail," "Big Hawaii" and "Mulligan Stew." It's no surprise considering the low ratings the shows have consistently claimed.

"Oregon Trail" will be replaced at 8 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Dec. 14 by "The Black Sheep Squadron," a new title for Robert Conrad's "Baa Baa Black Sheep" series of last season. "What Really Happned to the Class of '65" moves into the 9 p.m. Thursday slot vacated by "Rosetti and Ryan" beginning Dec. 8. "Mulligan Stew" will be replaced early in January by "event programming" and "Police Woman" moves to 9 p.m. Wednesdays at that time.

"There's a lot of injustice in the criticism leveled against him," Cash said. "He's on a very small salary and wears $89 suits. This man is not a money man. Money is not what this man is about. The gospel is what this man is all about."

Cash, 45, looks older despite the lack of gray in his dark hair. The age is in his brown eyes, on his lined face. The sensitivity he projects in his songs, many of which he wrote, comes through in conversation. It belies the tough, truck driver image he assumes by wearing all black.

The deep voice for which he is renowned is the same in conversation as it is in song.

HE IS SOFT-SPOKEN. Dealing with strangers, he is as gracious as an aristocrat. He has a knack for remembering names.

His sensitivity is reflected in his impression of a visit to Masada. That ancient mountaintop fortress overlooks the Dead Sea where a handful of Jews held off the Roman army for three years, until they committed suicide rather than be conquered.

"Masada was the most stirring, inspiring thing I've ever seen," Cash said.

Once the Christmas special is finished, he will begin work on a television film, "Thaddeus Rose and Eddy," a story about seeking directions in life set mostly in Texas. Dennis Weaver may play Eddy.

"But," Cash said, "I think of myself as a performer and a writer, not an actor."

South studied the dummy for a long time. He wondered about how he could have reached three notrump. There were nine quick tricks if spades failed to break and 11 if they did.

There also would be 11 tricks at hearts if the spades broke and maybe even 12 if they didn't. But South's problem was to get 10 while guarding against both a 4-2 spade break and a misplaced ace of clubs.

Then South solved his problem. He rose with dummy's ace of diamonds, led a low trump to his ace and cashed the jack of trumps to find both opponents following suit nicely. Then he took two of dummy's high spades. When everyone followed he was ready with a safety play. He ruffed a low spade, got back to dummy with the queen of trumps, discarded a club and diamond on the last two spades and led a club toward his king.

West won with the ace and the defendants scored two more club tricks, but the rubber bonus was safe in South's pocket.

Ask Andy

Coal is a real gas when it generates power

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Mary Elaine Schabell, 13, of Mundelein, Ill., for her question:

HOW IS GAS MADE OUT OF COAL?

At the present time, coal is used to generate about half of the electric power in the United States. This is done by burning coal under boilers containing water. Steam then comes from the boiling water and it spins turbines that turn generators to produce electricity. One ounce of coal can make as much electricity as 100 tons of water falling one foot.

Early in the 1970s, the growing shortage of clean-burning natural gas brought about the realization that research should be conducted to see if gas could be made from coal. Private industry and a large amount of assistance from the federal government was called upon.

Scientists believed it was necessary to develop a high heat value gas that could be sent through pipelines and replace natural gas for home heating. They also hoped to find a low heat value gas that could be used to fuel electric power plants. The latter gas would be cheaper but could not be transported by pipeline.

Coal was converted to high heat gas by burning in a closed vessel and blowing oxygen and steam through it to produce methane, the principal ingredient of natural gas.

By 1973, two power plants were in operation and were producing high heat gas. Additional plants have been planned, with some of them set for construction during the 1980s. Pilot projects to produce low heat gas are still planned for the immediate future.

In some of our steelmaking and other manufacturing plants, older methods of coal gasification are being used, but these methods contribute to air pollution and produce only low heat gas.

The Fischer-Tropsch process is a method of developing chemicals from coal by oxidation. The procedure calls first for turning pulverized coal into a gas by exposing the coal to oxygen and superheated steam. The gas, a mixture of carbon monoxide and hydrogen, in turn is passed over various solid catalysts to change it into useful products. Cobalt catalysts have been used to change the gas into diesel fuel. Iron catalysts can change it into gasoline.

Today the electric-utility industry uses about 300 million tons of bituminous coal each year. The aluminum industry, which uses great quantities of electricity, is building plants in coal regions in order to be closer to the low-cost sources of electric energy. The wave of the future, however, calls for additional expansion of research that will enable us to do better in the years to come.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Sheila Andrew, 14, of Davis City, Iowa, for her question:

WHERE DID THE ZITHER ORIGINATE?

During the 1800s in the United States, it was a common practice to use the music of the zither at a great many functions. It was very popular. The instrument sounds a lot like a harp or a lute and has anywhere from 29 to 42 strings.

The zither developed from an ancient Greek lute like instrument called a cithara. The instrument continues to be extremely popular in most of the central European countries.

To play a zither, you place it on the table in front of you. The strings are stretched over a flat, thin box that is rounded at one end. The strings are then plucked by the fingers of both hands. Quite often the zither-player also uses a plectrum, a small piece of ivory, horn, metal or plastic, to pluck the strings.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.
